Bloc troop manoeuvre staged near border

GDANSK (AP) — Strike leaders said today the new purge in Poland's Communist leadership and promise of democratic union elections will not bring an immediate end to the walkouts by more than 150,000 workers on Poland's northern Baltic coast.

Gdansk Radio reported that the strikes along the Gdansk coast continued today, and most plants and ports remained idle. Workers expressed a cautious degree of encouragement, and awaited the government's next move.

Meanwhile, Eastern-bloc troops were gathering for a Warsaw pact military exercise at an East German site just 96 kilometres west of northern Poland.

A Bulgarian artillery unit reached the manoeuvres site today, hard on the heels of a Czechoslovakian contingent that arrived Sunday, the official East Berlin news agency ADN reported.

The military exercise, which will involve 40,000 troops from six countries of the Soviet-led Warsaw pact, is scheduled for mid-September and concerns Western defence analysts who fear Moscow may use the manoeuvres to cover a military move to end the strikes — a ploy used in the invasion of Czechoslovakia eight years ago.

First Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski returned to Gdansk to arrange a second meeting with strike leaders, government sources said. Jagielski held an unprecedented meeting with the strike leaders Saturday.

Jagielski said the government will consider relaxing some aspects of censorship and increased news coverage of the strike, but he rejected the strikers' demand for an increase in the average monthly pay to $237 from $170 to offset rising meat prices caused by an end to government subsidies July 1.

And in an effort to end the 12-day-old strike, Communist Party leader Edward Gierek announced the firing of Premier Edward Babiuch and eight other top officials Sunday, and promised that union officials would be elected from among candidates nominated by the workers.

It was the biggest purge since Gierek came to power following the 1970 price riots in Gdansk that toppled party chief Wladyslaw Gomulka and left 50 dead.

Gierek also promised "fully democratic, secret elections with an unlimited number of candidates" to replace the government-appointed trade union officials in all factories where the workers want them.

But he rejected the strikers' demands for free trade unions and political reforms such as the right to strike, an end to censorship and the release of all political prisoners.

"We will go on striking," Leszek Walesa, head of the central strike committee, told 2,000 strikers at the Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk. "Only free trade unions can make us happy."

However, some of the strike leaders appeared to welcome the appointment of the new premier, Jozef Pinkowski.

Court fight over patriation?

OTTAWA (UPC) — A move by Ottawa to unilaterally patriate the constitution would result in the provinces launching court action against the federal government, Manitoba Premier Sterling Lyon warned on the weekend.

"I'm among the 78 percent who believe that ideally the constitution should be patriated to Canada and we should have an amending formula so that we can amend it ourselves," Lyon said in a weekend interview on CTV's Question Period.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has said he would consider unilaterally patriating the constitution if no progress was made at the first ministers' meetings in September.

But Lyon said the meetings will not be "a make or break final doomsday for Canada" and talks may well go on for another two to three years.

"We are prepared to carry on ... but not with false deadlines in mind or with the idea that if Mr. Trudeau's particular schedule isn't met ... the whole of Canada is going to come crumbling down," Lyon said.

The premier also said he and the other premiers were under the impression the September meetings would be one of a series of meetings which would eventually resolve all 12 constitutional issues before them.

Lyon said if the federal government ignored provincial demands to settle on an amending formula before going to London, the provinces could take legal action.

"I would think that before the federal government took unilateral action that this would be a very unique and unusual thing to do and they could expect legal and other ramifications from the provinces," he said.

However, Lyon said he was "optimistic" the premiers will reach "some measurable agreement on five, six, seven or eight" of the items on the constitutional agenda.

Justice Minister Jean Chretien said in Montreal today the federal government is "going to London" for a new constitution if it can get agreement on half the 12 items it is currently discussing with the provinces.

Chretien told a news conference Canadians are fed up with 53 years of fruitless constitutional talks and want action.

The federal government wants Canada to have the power to amend its own constitution. The British North America Act now can only be amended by an act of the British Parliament.

Meanwhile in Quebec, Premier Rene Levesque said Sunday a confidential federal memo outlining a strategy for unilateral patriation of the BNA Act proves that Ottawa is only playing games with the provinces in constitutional talks.

"Ottawa's action has already been thought out in advance," Levesque said of the memo, whose contents were published by an Ottawa newspaper last week.

Prime Minister Trudeau's office said the memo was genuine but stressed that unilateral patriation was only one of the options being weighed by the government.

Ottawa, Levesque said, is trying to profit from the defeat of sovereignty-association in the May referendum to diminish Quebec's powers.

Hang glider plunges to death

Some 200 spectators watched in horror Sunday afternoon as a 35-year-old hang glider plunged 300 metres to his death in Lake Cowichan.

In the crowd were the victims wife and 18-month-old child.

Patrick Adams of Campbell River was to give a demonstration for the Lake Cowichan Waterskiing Club.

As Adams was being towed aloft by a boat, his kite collapsed. He managed to get clear of the kite and hurtled to the lake.

Lake Cowichan RCMP said Adams fell between 265 and 310 metres.

Auto import quotas studied

OTTAWA (UPC) — The Canadian government would follow an American lead to protect the domestic auto industry by imposing import restrictions on Japanese cars, Industry Minister Herb Gray said on the weekend.

Public pressure to impose restrictions will increase unless there is a "substantial increase in the Canadian content" of Japanese imports, Gray said during a Standard Broadcast News radio interview.

Gray did not provide any specifics about how or when the import restrictions might be implemented.

"I'm not saying it would have to be identical action, but we would have to take steps, in our own interests, depending on what the United States did with respect to these Japanese imports," he added.

"Certainly, if the United States government takes restrictive measures in response to the investigation that's now under way by their international trade commission, we in Canada will have to give consideration to equivalent action of our trade situation and in light of our own legal frame-work," Gray said.

In the past six months, Japanese imports increased "very rapidly" while American manufacturers, notably, Chrysler, laid off workers when sales declined.

MiG jet shot down, Israelis warn Syria

TEL AVIV (AP) — The Israeli military warned today that it will not tolerate further Syrian air intrusions over southern Lebanon, where Israeli jets shot down a Syrian MiG-21 in a dogfight Sunday.

However, Israeli authorities sought to play down indications of heightened tension in the Israel-Lebanon border zone.

The frontier was reported quiet today. The artillery duels between Palestinian guerrillas and Israeli-backed Lebanese Christian militias ceased, Israeli authorities said.

The Maariv newspaper quoted an unidentified senior army officer as saying Israel will not permit Syrian jets to interfere with what Israel regards as its right to carry out routine aerial reconnaissance in southern Lebanon. The army spokesman in Tel Aviv confirmed the accuracy of Maariv's report.

"There is no change in policy from before the clash," said Dan Pattir, spokesman for Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who also is acting as defence minister.

The Jerusalem Post quoted sources as saying Israel wants to defuse the current tension. As evidence, the sources noted that Israel has not retaliated for the rockets that Palestinian gunners fired at settlements in northern Israel late last week.

The dogfight, the first since last September, occurred east of the Lebanese port of Sidon, 24 kilometres north of the Israel-Lebanon frontier. The two aerial clashes of 1979 were farther north and Sunday's dogfight appeared to mark a new willingness by Syria to enter the embattled southern region, which the Israeli air force patrols regularly.

The Soviet-made Syrian MiG-21 jet was shot down near the village of Kfar Milka, about 10 kilometres east of the Mediterranean city of Sidon. The Israeli command said all of its planes returned intact.

A Syrian military communique confirmed the loss of one Soviet-made jet and claimed an Israeli plane was hit.

The Syrian pilot parachuted to safety.

Chutist killed by plane

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A parachutist who had just jumped at 2,286 metres was struck and killed by a cargo plane in what one aviation official called a "one-in-a-billion" accident in the skies over the Borderland Air Sports Centre.

"He (the parachutist) was in the free-fall portion of his jump, which means he hadn't pulled his chute yet and was moving at a horrendous speed," said a U.S. Federal Aviation Administration official who asked not to be identified.

John Peter Nichols, 24, was pronounced dead at the scene of the Saturday accident, a San Diego County sheriff's department deputy said.

Quakes jolt coast

LIVERMORE, Calif. (UPI) — A mild earthquake Sunday jolted the Livermore area, which was shaken by a series of powerful temblors in January.

The early morning tremor hit 3.9 on the Richter scale. No damage or injuries were reported.

Meanwhile, a 5.5-magnitude earthquake causing no damage rattled the Shumagin Islands off Alaska Friday.

She moved, he bit ...band played on

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A postal worker, who says he only remembers whispering in his girlfriend's ear, has been convicted of mayhem and malicious disfigurement for taking a bite out of it and spitting it on the floor.

Sharon Diana Ross, 31, told a jury that after having a fight with Charles F. Williams, 30, he demanded that she dance with him. When the couple was on the dance floor, Miss Ross said, Williams whispered in her ear that if she moved he would bite it off. She moved and he did.

But Miss Ross said she was still friends with Williams, even after undergoing plastic surgery three times to have her ear reconstructed.

Williams will be sentenced Oct. 9.

Violent crime on rise in B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crimes of violence have taken an alarming jump in B.C. in the first half of this year, led by an increase in homicides of 28.2 per cent from the same period last year.

The latest statistics compiled from monthly reports of all municipal police forces and RCMP detachments of B.C. show at least 61 B.C. residents have met a violent death this year at the hands of a murderer.

Despite more strict federal legislation controlling firearms, guns were used in Vancouver robberies 44 per cent more in the first six months this year than in the same period a year ago.

The number of homicides in the province and the percentage increase exceeds that of either Metropolitan Toronto or Montreal, each with a population larger than B.C.

In B.C. by the end of June, 50 persons, including 16 in Vancouver, were strangled or fell victim to a knife, gun, blunt instrument or other device, wielded in most cases by someone they knew, compared with 39 for the same period in 1979. Eleven more murders have been reported since July 1.

There was an over-all increase of 12.9 per cent in violent crimes to the end of June. Sexual offences were up 21.4 per cent, including an increase of nearly 19 per cent in the number of rapes.

Robberies increased 25.1 per cent and assaults rose 11 per cent.

Frank Letkeman, director of data processing in the attorney-general's department, said the number of traffic injuries in the month of July was almost double that of the same month last year.

The over-all rate of increase for Criminal Code offences in B.C. was 7.1 cent, compared with 2.7 in 1979, 5.6 in 1978, 2.6 in 1977 and 0.8 in 1976.

Letkeman said there is a long-term pattern of crime rates rising for several years, then levelling off for a while before climbing to a higher plateau.

"It would seem we are now subject to the next climb," he said.

Jail breakers take hostages

MONTREAL (CP) — A prisoner was killed Monday at the beginning of a hostage-taking incident at the nearby maximum-security Laval Institute in which 11 people are being held by between seven and nine prisoners.

Guy Verreault, regional manager of communications for the penitentiary service, said negotiations were continuing with the prisoners who are holding the hostages at an exit where trucks enter the compound surrounding the prison building.

He said prison officials would not meet the prisoners' demands for a truck and drugs. "They're not going anywhere."

Verreault said earlier reports that the prisoners had access to the prison armory were not accurate. They are armed with three pistols, although one of them may not be real, he said.

"They tried to reach the armory but they didn't make it," Verreault said.

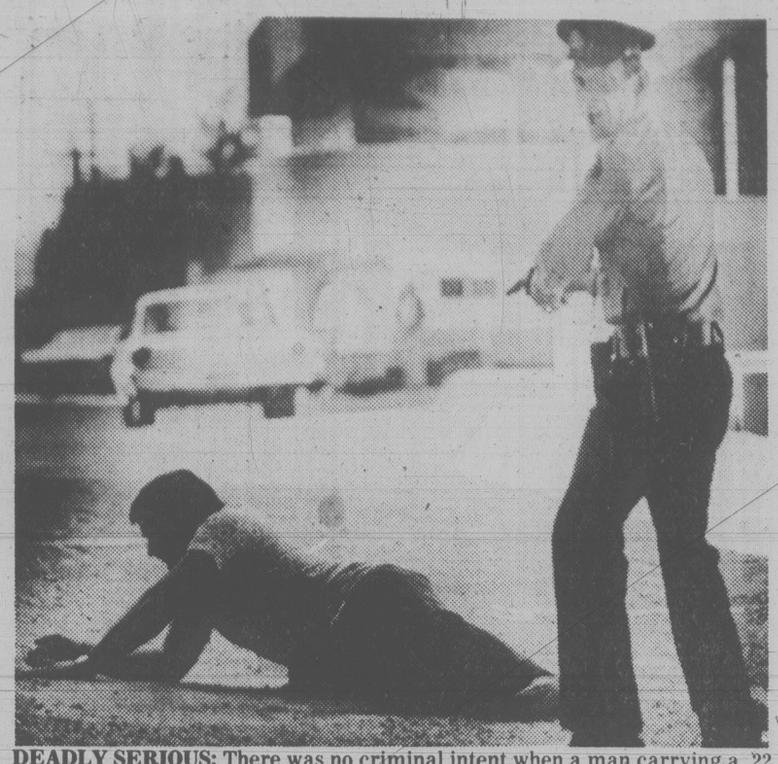
The dead prisoner was identified as John Connerney, a 44-year-old U.S. citizen serving a life sentence. Connerney was shot several times by a guard when he ran towards a pentitentiary panel truck in an apparent escape attempt that took place near where the hostages were being held.

It was not immediately known whether seven or nine prisoners were involved because the view was blocked by an air compressor, Verreault said. "The other two may still be inside the prison hiding," he said.

Five of the hostages are guards, two are outside contractors and four are prison instructors, Verreault said.

All but one of the prisoners are serving life sentences for murder.

The incident began in the prison welding shop at 8:15 a.m. EDT when the prisoners took the instructors hostage and used a welding torch to cut through two doors. They picked up the guards as they went along.



DEADLY SERIOUS: There was no criminal intent when a man carrying a .22 calibre rifle entered a Calgary restaurant. He just intended to show his friends who worked there the new stock he had installed. But how were police to know. Reports of a gunman entering a restaurant forced them into deadly serious action. Another gunman recently entered a Calgary restaurant and killed one of the employees in a shooting spree.

Angler mauled

CALGARY (CP) — A man was in hospital with severe facial lacerations after being attacked by a bear in Banff National Park Sunday.

Police and park wardens were searching in the Whisky Creek area of the park for the animal.

Police said the man and a friend were fishing when they spotted the grizzly bear. One man escaped while the other was attacked. No names have been released.

It was the third reported bear attack in Alberta in less than two weeks.

Environmentalists scoff at Alcan's new stand

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two members of an environmental group say William Rich, the man given the job of smoothing relations between Aluminum Co. of Canada and residents of north-central B.C., lacks an important ingredient — credibility.

"I don't see how he's going to have any credibility," Bruce Kanary, an executive of the Nechako Neyenkut Society said Saturday.

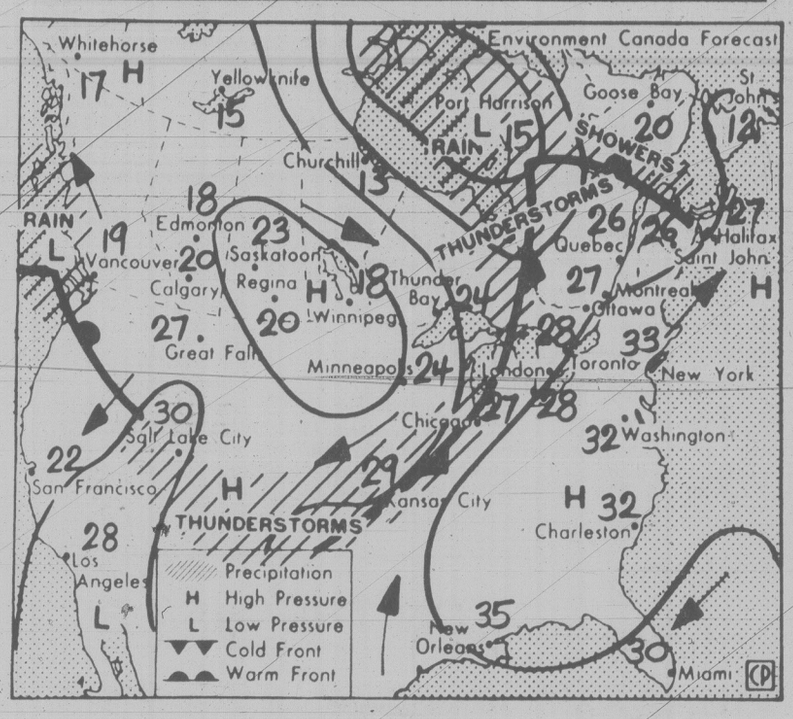
The Vanderhoof-based group is one of more than 30 groups protesting against Alcan's proposal for three new smelters and a doubling of electrical power capacity by diverting the Nechako and Nanika rivers.

Rich was appointed top boss for the Montreal-based company's B.C. operations earlier this week. The appointment followed a company decision not to appeal a B.C. Supreme Court ruling that Alcan had to obey the federal fisheries department in maintaining water levels in the Nechako River to protect salmon.

Alcan earlier had defied a fisheries ministry order to raise the water levels in the river and Kanary said the company's reversal of earlier policy will erode Rich's credibility.

"We'll be able to throw all this back in his face," Kanary said. "I don't see how he's going to have any credibility. They're (Alcan) in hot water."

the weather



Some rain was falling over the Queen Charlottes and north coast this morning as a small low pressure centre approached from the west. Other regions were generally clear with temperatures in the central interior near or below freezing. The low will weaken and stall over the north coast while another disturbance moves towards the south coast bringing some showers Tuesday to all regions.

Can halt baldness Finnish scientists say

LONDON — Two Finnish scientists said they have developed a scalp treatment that can halt baldness and even start new hair growing in many cases.

The scientists, who are putting the treatment on sale in the form of a solution, say that among volunteers who applied it to their scalp for 28 weeks, hair growth resumed in 60 per cent of the cases and hair loss decreased within four weeks.

The claims, however, was greeted with initial reservation by some medical experts.

The product contains a synthetic detergent, which clears away dead hairs and other dirt clogging the follicles — the tiny sacs in which hair grows.

Another ingredient, a compound, then sets in motion a process which allegedly results in the growth of new hair.

Tax break for North crusading MP's aim

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Politician Frank Oberle is out beating the drum for a proposal that could make him an instant folk hero across Canada's North.

Oberle, 48-year-old Progressive Conservative MP for Prince George-Peace River, thinks northerners should pay little or no income tax.

His plan, published recently in a 54-page manifesto, is aimed at promoting northern development and at eliminating what he calls economic unfairness suffered by northerners.

It's a simple proposal that would cost the federal government $470 million a year in lost income tax revenue.

Northerners living above the 60th parallel — which includes all the Northwest Territories, Yukon and small parts of Quebec and Labrador — would be exempt from all federal income tax.

Those living in the mid-north would be allowed to claim $5,000 in income tax-free, plus one-quarter of their basic personal deductions, in addition to the basic deductions allowed all taxpayers.

The mid-north zone would include areas north of the 55th parallel in B.C. and Alberta, north of 54 in Saskatchewan, 52 in Manitoba and above the 50th in Ontario, Quebec and Newfoundland.

There would be no tax breaks for anyone living south of those areas.

Northerners deserve the tax breaks because of the physical, social and economic hardships they suffer, says Oberle.

Northern health care is substandard, transportation is lacking and extremely costly, mail service is slow or non-existent and communications are poor. Also, prices are higher and anyone wanting a college or university education is forced to move south.

To back his argument, he gives the following statistics:

— Living essentials cost 20 to 80 per cent more than in large southe n cities.

— The Yukon and N.W.T. suicide rates are 27.38 and 10.63 per 100,000 residents compared with the national rate of 9.31.

— Yukon and N.W.T. infant mortality rates are 22.7 and 42.8 per 100,000 live births compared with the national average of 15.9.

— Toronto has .82 telephones per capita, and access to 33 radio stations and 17 television stations. A northern outpost such as Tuktoyaktuk, N.W.T., has .24 telephones per capita, and access to one radio and one TV station.

Oberle says governments and some companies already recognize the hardships of northern living by paying special allowances.

'It's not fair,' mother sobs

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Despite love and the best intentions, two mentally handicapped people have lost the right to raise their child.

Calling his decision "one of the most difficult I have made," provincial court Judge A. J. Scow ruled Friday that the one-year-old girl be committed permanently to the care and custody of the B.C. superintendant of child welfare.

The mother, 24, and father, 25, are former residents of Woodlands, a provincial government institution in New Westminster for the mentally handicapped. They live on their own, with help from social service agencies in the community.

Neither is able to work so their income comes from a provincial allowance for the handicapped.

Court was told the parents have the abilities of children eight or nine years old, although their baby was described as "a normal little girl with normal potential."

Scow said there is no doubt the parents love their child and want to care for her, but a person comes into the world with certain rights and should be given the opportunity to develop into a happy and useful member of the community.

He said the baby's emotional, social and psychological development would be in jeopardy if she were to be returned to her parents.

The judge said all possibilities had been explored, even before the child was born, to prepare the couple for the responsibilities of parenthood.

For five months before and shortly after the child's birth, social service agencies worked with the parents to prepare and assist them in taking care of the baby. But, 17 days after she was born, the agencies decided the parents were incapable of caring for the child, despite their help. The child was taken from their home by welfare officials.

Evidence showed the mother could not learn how to burp the child or how to hold her. The father was said to have trouble controlling his impulses, which placed the child in physical risk.

One lawyer described the case as "a tragedy without evil intent by anyone, including the parents."

Lawyer Dwight Ross, appointed to represent the couple, argued that the act of raising children is sacred in this society. Society has seen fit to integrate people with handicaps into the community and should therefore provide the support they need to raise their children, he said.

The couple had walked into the hearing convinced they would win back their baby that day. They had even bought a dress for her. When they left, the father was furious and the mother was crying, "It's not fair. It's not fair."

School damaged

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — Three children, about seven years old, are believed responsible for $100,000 damage to a school here, RCMP said Sunday. Police said the hammers were used to smash windows and toilets at Pinewood Elementary. Holes were kicked in walls and a copy machine and microwave oven were ruined.

Screams at PNE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A terrified mother watched helplessly Saturday night as a Pacific National Exhibition Playland ride carrying her two young daughters lost power and shot backwards, slamming into a stationary car on the ride.

"I was just petrified — screaming," said Marjorie Szendrey of Burnaby. "My heart was in my mouth from the shock of it. You know there is nothing you can do."

One daughter, Bonny, 11, had to spend the night in hospital with a badly bruised back. She took the brunt of the collision when she and her sister Tammy, 13, crashed into the stationary car on the Jet Star.

The accident occurred when the exhibition's electrical system apparently became overloaded, causing a 40-minute power failure throughout the midway.

Immigration snag puts island couple in tent

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hans Murbach, paraplegic Judy Norbury and their two-year-old daughter, Eliza, left their Vancouver Island home earlier this month for a tent near Port Angeles, Wash.

The couple says they'll live in the tent until Murbach receives either his Swiss divorce papers or a minister's permit allowing him to re-enter Canada.

Murbach, whose passport expired last year, left with his family from their Courtenay home Aug. 6 after Canadian immigration officials told him he had to be out of the country by July 31 or risk deportation or jail.

Judy's father, Michael Norbury, said Friday that Murbach has a valid U.S. visa and the family intends to camp out in Washington until Murbach can legally return to Canada.

Norbury said he wrote federal Immigration Minister Lloyd Axworthy on Aug. 14 asking that a special minister's permit be issued allowing Murbach to remain in Canada until his divorce papers arrive. But he said he hasn't received a reply.

Bridge cut

VANCOUVER (CP) — The rail link which supplies almost all Annacis Island industries with their raw materials was cut Sunday by a barge that apparently snapped its moorings and drifted about half a kilometre in the Fraser River before smashing into the Annacis causeway. The barge, owned by Seaspan, was carrying a load of steel.

Farm worker rally

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — About 150 farm workers attended a meeting Sunday to protest lack of child care facilities and housing conditions in agricultural work camps in the Fraser Valley. Spokesmen for the Canadian Farm Workers Union said they called the meeting because workers can't afford day care services and are forced to take their children to the fields when they work.

Railways fading?

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Canadians will travel by train less frequently in the 1980s than ever before, Robert Bandine, president of Canadian National Railways, said Saturday. Bandine said as the price of fuel continues to rise, it will become more desirable economically for people to travel by plane or bus for distances more than 800 kilometres.

Ending the tedium

The B.C. Legislature has adjourned after 111 sitting days. Thank heavens for small mercies.

The session deteriorated into hopeless tedium within a month of its beginning, and for the last three months at least, hardly a British Columbian has been aware that it was still going on.

Debate dragged on for days about the state of roads in remote corners of the province, old Social Credit skeletons, and other issues of minimal concern to anyone. Both sides dusted off their hoary rhetoric from the last few elections and repeated it, apparently endlessly.

In itself, perhaps, this is not necessarily bad. The legislators are boring no one but themselves and a few unfortunate staff members and reporters well-paid to listen to the speeches.

More distressing is the fact that the few items on the legislative agenda that might actually be of significant importance to the future of the province were dashed off in a matter of minutes or, at the most, hours.

In a traditional scenario, the government saved debate on its most important bills and most controversial ministers until the absolute end of the session, when all opposition MLAs were aching to savor a few days of summer vacation. Deals were then made to ensure that these bills and spending estimates would be debated cursorily, at best.

In the last few days of the current session, for instance, the MLAs whipped through a bill giving the right to vote to business tenants, a bill governing the extremely contentious issue of Sunday and holiday shopping, and a bill entirely changing the procedures for government involvement in future energy projects.

The estimates of Energy Minister Bob McClelland and Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Garde Gardom took hardly any time at all to pass. Yet these are perhaps the most significant portfolios in government today.

The people of B.C. are not well-served by a legislature that debates the routes of new roads for a week, but spends only an hour on the future of energy in the province.

Better, but not best

Education Minister Brian Smith is heading in the right direction in allowing raises to the indemnities of school trustees.

Smith announced Friday that the members of the province's 75 school boards will now be able to raise their own salaries to a maximum of $4,000 per year, double the current $2,000 ceiling.

In another progressive step, boards will be able to pay their chairman 50 per cent more than an ordinary trustee and their vice-chairman 25 per cent more.

These steps recognize the growing workload of school trustees, especially in the large urban districts of Greater Victoria, Vancouver, and the Lower Mainland. The existing limit of $2,000 was far below the actual costs to many trustees of their public service.

The changes recognize also the extra burden the chairman of the school board carries. In many of the larger districts, the chairmanship is almost a full-time job.

What the changes do not do, however, is eliminate the discrepancies between the salary-setting procedures for school trustees and that for other elected officials.

Members of municipal councils are allowed to set their own salaries. Period. There is no provincially set ceiling. There are no limits on how much more a mayor can receive than an alderman.

The government's assumption is that if a council goes hog-wild in setting its own salaries, the voters are the people to deal with that — at the polls at the next election.

School boards, however, still come under the thumb of their big brother, the education ministry.

The present system for setting mayor's and aldermen's salaries isn't the best either. It is exceedingly difficult for any group to set its own salaries. Some type of independent commission or perhaps guidelines based on an area's population, area and budget would be better.

But until that system is brought into place, it seems unfair to discriminate against school trustees by setting arbitrary salary ceilings.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Haze over party philosophy

As a quadrennial sporting event, if nothing more important, the United States presidential election will be watched by Canadians with almost as much interest as Americans, from now until November.

To foreigners it is a baffling spectacle of sound, fury, and kaleidoscopic change but at least we can see already that our neighbors seem to be moving in a social direction opposite to ours. In the rough, often false, catch words of politics the United States is becoming more conservative and Canada more liberal.

So it seems, but is it true?

Observe, first, the American election. On the surface, and in the opinion polls, Ronald Reagan, a conservative, or more accurately a nostalgist, is ahead of Jimmy Carter, ostensibly a liberal. But neither of them fits these popular definitions.

Reagan, though he attacks the president for trying to fine tune the economy and producing only inflation, has emerged, himself, as a super-Keynesian. He would cut taxes to stimulate business as proposed by the British sage (in a very different time), thus swelling the state's revenues and (an exceedingly wild surmise) balancing the budget while miraculously providing more guns and butter in the meantime.

Guns and butter

In addition to his tortured arithmetic, Reagan is standing historic Republicanism on its head.

Carter, the liberal, won the 1976 election by promising to balance the budget and repair the leaking treasury. By last winter he was using the orthodox tools of high interest rates and good old Republican principles to curb the disastrous inflation launched by his Democratic predecessor, Lyndon Johnson, to finance the Vietnam war.

In short, the liberal has acted like a conservative. Now he changes pace to seek reconciliation with his party's mutinous left wing by accepting its liberal platform of unbalanced budgets. Yet he still denounces the inflationary promises of his rival.

Despite the confusion and contradiction on both sides of politics, the rightward trend is unmistakable, on the surface anyhow. Reagan, a visceral if not a philosophical conservative, rides that current toward office. But he can stumble, the polls can fluctuate and many strange things will happen before polling day.

Second, observe Canada.

In 1979 it defeated a government Liberal by name and liberal by conviction in the mind of its leader, the front, custodian, and oracle of party doctrine.

The new Conservative government was led by Joe Clark who, having suddenly discovered Keynes, proposed to increase the Liberal deficit and repudiate the economic creed of Conservatism. Rescued from such apostasy by wiser men, he soon repudiated his repudiation and, in his first budget, proposed the exact antithesis of his platform, with tax increases and reduced deficit.

That groping return to the ancient faith apparently destroyed the Clark government (though in truth the nation voted, in 1980, more against Mr. Clark as a leader than against his policies with little enthusiasm for the only alternative).

Once back in office, Pierre Trudeau, the Liberal, became more liberal than ever, in the contemporary meaning of the world. What, then, is the meaning? Assuredly it is not the meaning understood in the nineteenth century and even half a century ago when historic liberalism meant laissez-faire, total faith in the unerring competitive market and minimum government.

PIERRE TRUDEAU

After Mackenzie King had quietly reversed that creed to win the election of 1935, Canadian Liberalism meant more and more government, less and less faith in the market, and horror of laissez-faire with its abuse of weak social groups.

Facing his last few years of public life (or so he says) Trudeau is expanding the state's intervention in the economy much further than King proposed or imagined, while protesting, of course, his faith in private enterprise (which often demands tariffs, subsidies, and other benefits from the state). Trudeau is also resisting the expansion of provincial power, until recent times a sacred Liberal desideratum.

One among many economic results of liberal policies in Canada and the United States is inflation because, as Trudeau has said of his own government, it tried to do too much, too fast. Is the speed of this leftward drive slackening in Canada? The autumn budget may give us the beginning, only the vague beginning, of an answer. In the United States the election may give an answer somewhat less vague.

To a logician the politics of both nations can make no sense at all. But politics in a democracy is never logical and the present confusion is quite normal — the never-ending search for illogical, workable compromise between power groups, regions, and diverse interests.

Quite normal, too, is the certainty that neither Carter nor Reagan will or can do next year what he promises this autumn — a conforting thought. Each of them, for example, is invoking the spirit of Franklin Roosevelt to inspire the Democratic and Republican parties alike, though he ran, in 1932, on a conservative policy of balanced budgets and orthodox finance, out-Hoovering Herbert Hoover. Then, in power, he launched the New Deal of Keynesian deficit spending to cure the Great Depression which was uncured until the Second World War.

Still there is a deeper logic in this year's turmoil north and south of the border than meets the logician's eye. Consider, third, the opposite political doctrines.

People's wisdom

Apart from immediate policies and contradictions, liberalism, current and historic, means maximum faith in the people's wisdom. Conservatism means faith, whether admitted or not, in an elite or congeries of elites. There is the real dividing line between two separate philosophies, however blurred they may be in day-to-day politics.

Thus the deepest question of all in a free society is how much faith the people's wisdom deserves (or actually enjoys in these times of economic grants) and how much power can be safely trusted to the elites.

The Americans will decide that question for themselves, over time, through their own complex electoral system. In Canada the fact that Trudeau is an elitist par excellence, ambivalent like all humans, should not distract us from his liberalism, contemporary version. And his last years will be his most important.

RICHARD GWYN

Recognizing the inevitable

WINNIPEG — Although the verbiage was as thick as ever and the decisions taken as thin as ever, still the two-day provincial premiers' conference here will earn a niche in history.

For one thing, instead of the usual prints, or drawings or carvings, the visiting premiers got, as a going away gift, a top-of-the-line Hudson's Bay blanket.

For another, for the first time in the 21-year history of this annual gathering of Canada's regional warlords, none of the people who really mattered were here.

Those who were absent, but who had more influence on what happened than any of the premiers present, came in three kinds.

Long shadow

First, foremost, and all by himself, Pierre Trudeau. The further away he is from the action, the longer the prime minister's shadow seems to get. You could spot Trudeau's telegraphic influence upon, for instance, Newfoundland's Brian Peckford. A couple months ago, Peckford was going around saying cockily that the federal government was just "an agent of the province."

Now chastened and wary, he pronounces himself "a good Canadian" and talks of the need for a "strong central government." (Also, of course, of strong provincial ones).

Next among the missing, and as influential in their way as was Trudeau, were the 24 million or so Canadians. "Goddamn Trudeau," said one premier, staring moodily at a long, late-night Scotch and water, "he's got Gallup and Goldfarb on his side." The premier meant by this that the polls and the pollsters report that Canadians overwhelmingly (by 78 per cent, according to Gallup), want what Trudeau wants — a made-in-Canada constitution, and the quicker the better.

The premiers, therefore, went out of their way, with the pained circumspection of walkers over live coals, not to be seen to be opposing what they think it is that Canadians want. The conference's communique on the constitution was indeed, as the chairman, Sterling Lyon of Manitoba, proudly proclaimed, "non-confrontationist." The communique also was bland enough for Trudeau to swallow it in one gulp.

Last among the absent, but still influential, were, as a sub-group among all Canadians, westerners. They are alienated, and are getting more so. It should come as no surprise, therefore, that in the closed-door sessions the harshest anti-Ottawa remarks were made, not by Quebec's Rene Levesque but by Alberta's Peter Lougheed and Saskatchewan's Allan Blakeney.

So Lougheed and Blakeney led the charge to include in the conference communique an attack on Ottawa's "national unity" ads — the ones with the Canada geese flying about, presumably in search of a Bill of Rights. Except that against them was the felt presence at the meeting of all other Canadians and of Trudeau.

So, when the semantic strokes began to get short, Ontario's Bill Davis, who thinks the same way as do most Canadians and as does Trudeau and, most important for his own political future, as do almost all Ontarians, managed to clean out from the communique all criticisms of the federal ads, and even to expunge from the document any denial by the premiers of Ottawa's right to act unilaterally should it and the provinces fail to agree on constitutional change.

The mood of westerners watching the conference from afar made its presence felt though. All the premiers but Davis lined up with Lougheed in his opposition to a federal tax on natural gas exports. If Ottawa goes ahead with the tax, "the danger to Confederation will be grave," Lougheed warned.

This show of spirit was the most the premiers could muster on their behalf. Lyon said almost pleadingly that the provinces almost had to be "part of the process" of constitutional revision.

No common front

As softly, Nova Scotia's John Buchanan said of the possibility of Ottawa's unilaterally patriating the constitution: "It would be most regrettable." Neither in public or in private, did any a premier try to raise the banner of a "common front" against Ottawa. None cared to threaten to walk out of the September talks if Trudeau refuses to give the provinces what they want.

Instead, faced by the twin pressures of public opinion and Trudeau's personal power, the premiers, Lougheed and Blakeney excepted, are in a mood to accept about anything they can get.

"None of us will say it, to each other or out loud to you guys, but we're all infected by a sense of inevitability," said one premier later. "We know that either Trudeau will get what he wants at the (constitutional) conference in September, or he'll get it anyway, unilaterally. That's all there is to all of this."

Then he took another sip of scotch and water.

Bankers on top

It seems, from what we heard over a local radio station recently, that an enlightened citizen of Nelson has taken one of our chartered banks to court to recover the paltry sum of eight dollars and a few pennies of interest overcharged on his account.

I wonder how much time that citizen did spend in court and how much he had to pay his lawyer to recover eight dollars plus a few cents.

Wouldn't it have been easier to make an appointment with the bank's accountant or the manager to make the correction?

As a small customer of the same chartered bank, I have nothing but praise for the courteous, efficient services I have always received.

Not long ago the now-folded Victorian conducted a survey in which readers were asked to list — in order of trust — 10 given occupations of professional and non-professional persons and institutions. Doctors and bankers came on top.

My own personal opinion has not changed. — E. I. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

What policies?

A recent poll reported that more Canadians were satisfied with the programs and policies of the Liberal government. One might be forgiven for asking "more than how many?" and "what programs and policies?"

On the surface, it would appear that an energy conservation program which subsidizes the price of gasolene with $5 billion from general tax revenue would be self-defeating — and it clearly is.

The dictatorial enforcement, without democratic process, of the metric system over the objections of 70 per cent of the population might be viewed as a further sop to Quebec by a government which has survived for 15 years solely on the vote of that province.

Confirmation of the $4 billion Douglas F-18 aircraft package might be questioned since the plane cannot meet price, weight, performance and weapons specifications. The selection of this aircraft must rank (after the Bomarc) as one of the most asinine equipment procurement ventures ever to emanate from Ottawa, totally removed from the security needs of Canada.

One might ponder the continued expenditure of $3 billion of tax revenue in U.I.C. payments when the bulk of this goes to affluent families in the over $25,000 a year group while the real poor, underprivileged unemployed grovel in poverty for welfare hand-outs.

We might even think about the continued decay and reduction in our manufacturing capabilities while we live in this soap bubble of apparent prosperity, temporarily sustained by the brutal decimation of our natural resources and by the criminal increase in our debt burden to be sloughed off on the shoulders of next generations.

And these, you say, are the policies which increase the popularity of the Liberal government? Well, how about that!

I suppose that as long as dear old Pierre is there on the boob tube, in all his charismatic glory, all will be well for Canada and Long Live The Queen — oops, sorry, we had a poll on that matter too, didn't we? — Ian Cass, 4124 Shelbourne Street.

Victoria Landmarks

The Victoria City Ordinance of Nuisances, dated September 23, 1862, gives a clear indication of early lifestyle in the downtown area.

No person was permitted to drive or ride in excess of eight miles per hour, and it was not allowed to lead or drive any horse or cart on any sidewalk.

Footpaths were not to be cluttered for more than six hours, and during building construction it was prohibited to take up more than one third of the street. The beating of door mats in the street was an offence, and it was decreed that all stray pigs and goats would be impounded and sold after seven days.

Modern environmentalists will be interested to note that no rubbish or filth was to be thrown in the harbor. Although a first offence would bring a fine of £5, the second offence would result in imprisonment. No night soil (human excrement collected for fertilizing the soil) was to be emptied or carried about between 6 o'clock in the morning and 8 o'clock in the evening.

The fire bylaw stated that the mayor and the councillors were to attend all fires, together with fire wardens and the chief engineer, in case of the need to authorize building demolition.

Poland a 'test'

By DON COOK

PARIS — The labor unrest in Poland is regarded in Western European capitals as the most crucial test of detente in Europe since the Helsinki agreements were signed five years ago.

On the whole, it is considered unlikely that the Soviet Union will intervene by force in Poland, although officials see this restraint as depending on whether an agreement to end the strike can be reached promptly by the Polish government. If the situation reaches a point where the government's stability appears to be jeopardized, then diplomatic analysts believe that anything could happen.

"If the Soviet Union moves its troops out of their barracks in Poland to crush the strike, then the Helsinki agreements will be virtually written off, and I am certain that an immediate response from Western Europe would be to cancel the Madrid conference, which is due to open in mid-November to review how the agreements are working," a highly placed European diplomat said.

"On the other hand, if the Polish situation works itself out peacefully with some adjustments and concessions by the Polish government to the strikers, both economic and political, then I think we can fairly say that the detente process in Europe is continuing and working fairly well. If the Polish crisis is resolved in this kind of evolution, then it will, I think, create a fairly positive atmosphere for the Madrid meeting."

The Soviet Union has two tank divisions of approximately 25,000 men stationed in Poland, ostensibly with the military mission of "securing lines of communication" between Russia and the Soviet army in East Germany. Despite recurring troubles in Poland in 1953, 1956, 1958, 1970 and 1976, Russian troops have never yet been ordered out of barracks to intervene. Such a move would risk a Polish civil war, at a time when the Soviet military is already involved in Afghanistan.

These factors are likely to be a greater deterrent to open Soviet military intervention in Poland than the Helsinki agreements and possible reaction by the West. Nevertheless, from the Western point of view, the situation in Poland is a clear test of a key provision of the Helsinki agreements, included at Western insistence after two years of fierce argument and tough diplomatic negotiation. The passage reads:

"All peoples always have the right, in full freedom, to determine when and as they wish their internal and external political status, without external interference, and to pursue as they wish their political, economic, social and cultural development."

This is precisely what is happening in Poland.

Polish strikers at shipyard in Gdansk

The ice man

By ROBERT WILLIAMSON
The Globe and Mail

Jack Davis sat staring at the judge's empty chair, a convicted criminal, his political career in ruins, a quizzical look on his bird-like face.

The courtroom had emptied, except for the tall, attractive young woman sobbing softly in the back corner of the public gallery. Finally, Mr. Davis walked over to her. But he couldn't bring himself to push through the last row of chairs. With a haunting, distant gaze betraying no emotion, he reached over and, for a moment, father and daughter clasped hands. Then, without a word, the Ice Man walked away from his distraught daughter, out into the jostling corridor where his wife was cursing any and all associated with the administration of justice.

The poignant courtroom scene, all but unnoticed two years ago, was a frozen frame of the public image of a Rhodes Scholar who became chief planner for the old B.C. Electric Co. and then spent eight years as a federal and provincial cabinet minister: maddeningly methodical, shy and aloof, awkwardly proper even in close family relationships; a loner.

Today, Jack Davis has struggled back to become the enigma of the B.C. Legislature. The MLA for North Vancouver-Seymour, the seat he resigned in a final, desperate gesture of contrition to an unmoved court and to which 11,000 voters loyally reinstated him, has become a sort of west coast Herb Gray caucus critic at large (although philosophically they are also half a continent apart).

"I don't really expect, and I'm certainly not lobbying, to get back into the provincial cabinet," he says. "But right now I'm enjoying my freedom, saying what I think."

Passed over twice since his re-election, he likely never will be invited back into Premier Bennett's cabinet. Mr. Bennett swiftly fired Mr. Davis as his Energy, Transport and Communications Minister and changed the lock on his office door as soon as he heard police were investigating Mr. Davis's practice of flying economy-class and cashing in the balance of his first-class government ticket.

The Vancouver federal Liberal establishment stood up for an old colleague as character witnesses. Mr. Bennett, who fished Mr. Davis and opportunist provincial Liberals out of his 1975 unity-for-private-enterprise net, was asked and refused.

This month Mr. Davis, 64, got in some licks of his own at the legal system he believes did him in.

The system is not as harsh with its errant judges as it is with ordinary citizens and a better way has to be found to deal with them, he said. And he spoke with the bitterness of an accused who two years ago was told by a judge that he was being punished more severely because he was a cabinet minister and not just an ordinary citizen.

Since then there has been the case of a drinking judge who became a hit-and-run driver and apparently tried to intimidate a policeman. And there was another drinking judge who picked up a prostitute in a downtown hotel.

"They mustn't be left to their rarified atmosphere to protest and pontificate among themselves," Mr. Davis told the Legislature. "Otherwise, how can you explain to the average layman why the in-group in the legal profession rarely ever suspends a judge?"

The outburst revived the lingering, essential puzzle of the Davis affair: how could a man so bright not see that casually pocketing a few hundred dollars here and there might appear improper — and at the worst be held to be a violation of public trust and criminal fraud?

There are some clues. He is not your shrewd, back-slapping Good Time Charlie politician. His is the cool professional approach of the consummate engineer. He can become so wrapped up in big issues that he loses touch with the here and now, oblivious to sensitivities, forgetting to keep track of expense spending and even not knowing the names of some of his office staff.

He didn't care about the cold-fish image when he used to squirrel himself away by a window back in economy class, talking to his Dictaphone, preferring the documents piled on the seat beside him to martinis with the buddies up in first-class.

Now it hurts that his name is connected with public disgrace, not the clean-up of the Great Lakes or the concept of 200-mile coastal economic zones.

For now, though, he has no plans to abandon the Social Credit caucus. The party may auction his 1979 campaign shoes for $120, but it can't buy his unswerving allegiance.

Independent MLAs have no audience and no future, says Mr. Davis. Meanwhile, the Socreds' slim majority in the legislature compels the cabinet to suffer the embarrassment of his well-publicized, thoughtful critiques.

Nobody wants Soviet intervention

By PETER OSNOS
The Washington Post

A single crucial factor unites all the players in the drama now unfolding in Poland. None of them — the workers, the dissidents, the Polish government, not even the Kremlin — wants the climax to be Soviet intervention.

The Kremlin seems to understand the guaranteed disastrous consequences of using its own troops in a land as volatile, as nationalistic and as populous as Poland. The Soviets have been severely provoked by political outbursts in Poland before, yet Moscow has never resorted to force.

Instead, the Russians rely on the Poles to work out their own solutions. The Soviets have no taste for the chaos of a civil war their involvement would almost certainly produce.

However profound their antipathy for the communist regime, Poles for their part recognize that in a conflict with their giant neighbor to the east, they cannot win. And the costs of losing would be, aside from the bloodshed, and end to the limited sense of spiritual freedom the Poles have managed to achieve inside the Soviet empire.

Poland today is far from being a free society in American terms. But the range of ideological beliefs openly expressed in the country is unique for Eastern Europe. The Polish Catholic Church is as powerful as any in the world, despite the direct conflict between Christian dogma and Marxism.

Barely more than a year ago, millions of Poles displayed fervent allegiance for a Polish Pope as he toured his homeland — in its way as spectacular a display of defiance to the Kremlin as any event of the post-war era.

As recently as 1976, during the last flash of worker unrest over rising food prices, the Communist Party headquarters in a provincial city was gutted. The government was pressured into lenience for those involved by an effective alliance of Warsaw intellectuals and militant workers around the country. Moreover the price increases were rescinded.

This, too, is a remarkable achievement for the popular will in a totalitarian nation.

To put it mildly, the Polish people have complaints about their lives now, as contained in the Gdansk strikers' platform for widespread economic and political reforms. But the very vehemence of the workers' insistence reflects a certain sense of power and a feeling that they can achieve gains by demanding them.

In 1956 and 1970, Poles succeeded in replacing the leadership in Warsaw with figures pledged to social change. Neither Waldislaw Gomulka or the present party chief, Edward Gierek, has gone anywhere near far enough to meet those pledges. But by communist standards, Gierek has repeatedly acceeded to popular wishes and appears ready to do so again now, at least up to a point where his mandate from Moscow is not endangered.

In short, the record in Poland is that political protest from the people produces results that benefit the population. Up to now that has been accomplished without the total collapse of order or a declaration of independence from the Warsaw Pact — two developments that would unleash a Soviet military response.

From the Kremlin perspective, it has been necessary over the decades to permit the countries of Eastern Europe a form of latitude, a series of safety valves for the tensions that their submission to Moscow inevitably causes.

Romania, for instance, has pursued an independent course in foreign policy for years, often challenging the Soviets on such key matters as relations with China, Middle East policy and defence spending. The Soviets are unable to bind Romanian leader Nicolae Ceaucescu to the Soviet party line.

Hungary, after the ravages of the Soviet invasion of 1956, has emerged as truly the land of "goulash communism." The economy is relatively free-wheeling and de-centralized. The standard of living is improving and public morale appears to be good. The Soviets lag far behind the Hungarians in providing comfort to the people.

Czechoslavakia maintains a high standard of living, but is basically a nation so wounded by its tragic effort at liberalism in 1968 that its people are essentially numb. To many Poles, Czechoslavkia is a nightmare vision of what would happen if they took on the Soviets and lost.

Poland's latitude from the Kremlin stems from its internal combustiveness; the peoples' determination to speak out and act in sensitive areas. The danger now, as it has been in the past, is that the combustion might well lead to an uncrontrollable explosion.

Rustic is thing called folks

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — Do you ever wish you had it all to do over again, folks? Do you wish you'd taken up the kind of work where you can call people folks, instead of Sir and Deadbeat and Big Shot and Meathead? The kind of life where you can say "By golly!" and "There's a heap of goodness in this old world of ours"?

But you didn't take that road, did you? You thought you'd be smart, get ahead, see your name up there in lights. So you went and became an airline stewardess, or a cop, maybe a fashion model so skinny you clack like a floating crap game when you walk down the street, maybe one of those systems analysts who are always saying, "Miniaturize the digital circuitry to one-ten-thousandths of a megaherz."

Maybe a surgeon hauling out two dozen gall bladders a day. All day long saying nothing but, "Forceps!" and "Sterilize that hemostat immediately or the south ventricle will become resected!"

It isn't all it's cracked up to be, is it? And do you know why? Because, by golly, you've lost touch with nature. Chances are your granddaddy warned you'd lose touch with nature when you told him you were going to become an airline stewardess, or cop, or fashion model.

Remember what he said? "Girl," he said, "there's a heap of goodness in this old world of ours, but all you're going to find up in those airplanes is sore feet and bunions and boozers cussing because they can't have a third martini."

"Boy," he said, "folks like us got a lot to be happy about, but if you go off to the city to pound a beat all you're going to see of the human race is pipsqueaks, gnats and worms."

Remember where your granddaddy was sitting when he said it? In a rocking chair. Remember where the rocking chair was situated? On the porch.

You don't have a rocking chair, do you? Don't have a porch, either, I'll bet.

Well, what do you have? A cart full of coffee, tea or milk. A nightstick and a .38-calibre revolver. A cup of yogurt in the refrigerator. A few scalpels. A little digital megaherz oscillator cup. It's a long way from nature.

When June starts to roll around, like right now, it probably makes you feel like kicking yourself for ever thinking you'd like to be in the big time instead of keeping your feet in the soil. Taking out all those gall bladders may make the nurses think you're as slick as the cat's whiskers, but in your heart you know you'd rather be walking through fields of buttercups, don't you?

Why by George, you could have been a farmer. Could be getting up these sweet mornings to slop the hogs and check out the cows for hoof-and-mouth disease. Could spend the whole day feeling the honest sweat on your brow while you steer the plow behind old Dobbin.

Have you ever noticed how farmers' sweat is honest? They don't have to choke their pores up with chemical sweat suppressors the way systems analysts and fashion models and surgeons have to do. That's because farmers' sweat is honest. Farmers don't have to be ashamed of it, don't have to treat it like a mad Victorian grandmother that's got to be kept locked in the attic.

How did we all get so far away from nature? "Folly and pride" granddaddy would have said. That's what my own granddaddy said many years ago, in fact, when I went up to him in his rocker on the porch and told him I was going to the city to take a job stacking groceries on a supermarket shelf.

"Folly and pride, boy," he said. "There's a heap of goodness in this old world of ours, but when you start stacking those groceries you're going to find . . ."

"I'm sick and tired of picking the ticks off the sheepdog, granddaddy," I cried. "I want to make it in the big time. I want to be a star."

And what did it get me? What did it get any of us? What good is stardom if you can't call people folks anymore? If you can't see the heap of goodness there is in the world for all the digital circuits and gall bladders and coffee, tea and milk that get in your way?

And all the things we've lost: sitting on the porch swing at sunset smelling the honeysuckle. Leaning against the silo on hot afternoons and smelling the stable. Walking through the meadow on a dewy morning and dodging the copperheads.

Compared to these, what pleasure can a body get from winning the Nobel Prize for gall-bladder removal, from cornering the silver market or dancing all night with Liza Minnelli or handing Prince Charles a cup of coffee, tea and milk and hearing him say, "My dear, if you are not a divorced woman, may I make you, some day, the queen of England?"?

Who among us, folks, wouldn't give up all that for the sweet delight of hoisting a pitchfork and strolling down toward the south forty while picking our teeth with a piece of hay? At least on a sunny day in June? Or maybe just for a few hours of that sunny day, in the soft of the morning, before the sun really gets up there and starts to boil your neck?

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	2♠	3♡	3♠
4♡	5◇	6♠	Pass
6♡	Pass	Pass	Dble

Opening lead — eight of spades.

This deal occurred many years ago in a match between Argentina and the United States. Egisto Rocchi, East for Argentina, opened the bidding with two spades after Charles Coon, the American North, passed.

Rocchi couldn't tell at this stage that he would eventually wind up minus 1,210 points with his fine hand. South, Eric Murray, bid three hearts, and West, Ricardo Calvente, bid three spades.

After North bid four hearts, Rocchi made a slam try by bidding five diamonds. South now bid six clubs, which was converted by North to six hearts. Rocchi made a forcing pass and Calvente then doubled six hearts.

Murray had no problem at all making twelve tricks. He won the spade lead with the ace and crossruffed the rest of the way, trumping all five of his clubs in dummy. Calvente scored the only trick for the defense — his ace of trumps. Rocchi, who had opened with a strong two-bid, did not take a trick!

The contract would have failed had Calvente led the ace and another trump originally, but this was by no means a clear-cut lead. North-South scored 1,210 points for making the doubled slam contract.

The American East-West pair at the second table, Mervin Key and Robert Nail, also did not fare well with their 25 high-card points. The bidding went:

North	East	South	West
1♡	2♡	5♡	Dble

The Argentine North scratched up an opening heart bid and found himself in five hearts doubled when it was next his turn to bid. East stood for the double (a questionable decision) and led the king of clubs.

North made the contract with an overtrick, scoring 750 points, but, not having bid the slam, his team lost 460 points on the deal.

Tonight's operas end six-week Festival series

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The Victoria International Festival ends tonight with the second performance of "Opera Piccola," a program of two short contrasted operas.

It's a satisfactory — in fact thrilling — conclusion to the fine series of concerts that has occupied the last six weeks.

Sunday's McPherson audience was not large but it made up in enthusiasm for its lack of numbers. Genuine ovations followed both works — Donizetti's Rita and Menotti's The Medium. In the latter case it lasted for minutes, bringing cast, conductor and director back for numerous curtain calls.

Artistic-stage director Pierette Alarie had chosen well not only in juxtaposing early 19th century and contemporary operas, but also comedy against tragedy and rustic simplicity against simplicity of a quite different kind.

Both operas are delightfully staged with compactly attractive settings by Tom Taggart moodily lit by Richard J. Citti, providing a stage environment in which Carole Sabiston's perceptive and tasteful costumes are well set forth.

Alarie's clearly defined inventive stage direction, perfectly tuned to the comic and tragic demands of the two operas, offers the singers an ideal situation in which to deploy their talents.

Members of the Victoria Symphony Summer Festival Orchestra are in the pit under the always sensitive but unfailingly dramatic direction of William Shookhoff. There were brief moments Sunday when the orchestra, especially the winds, tended to over-ride the singers. But this must be recognized as a shortcoming of the McPherson pit which is neither large or deep enough for its purpose.

The comic opera, Rita, comes first on the program. Probably no one in the audience had ever heard of it which is a pity. It is delightful. Full of ebullient melodies and country rhythms and salted with reminiscent phrases any Donizetti opera fan would identify.

The rustic story concerns the strong-minded proprietess of a little country inn, Beppo, her henpecked husband and the stranger who turns out to be Gasparo, her first husband believed drowned. The action heats up as Beppo schemes to gamble for his freedom.

Richard Margison's Beppo was excellent; well acted and musically sung, showing off his well placed, clear tenor to advantage. He endowed the character with charm — a kind of elfin innocence that won sympathy.

As Rita, Doreen Joachim was a believable firebrand, both as to her strong, well focused and confident soprano voice and her poised authoritative stage presence. The role of Gasparo was excellently done by Rod Campbell who possesses a smooth and rich baritone that is also expressive to a high degree.

The non-singing role of Berta was nicely done by Nina Hansen.

The Medium is a moving, compellingly dramatic work that is familiar to some of us. I have seen it on several occasions but never to better advantage than on Sunday.

The cast was uniformly excellent from the velvet-voiced intensity of Dorothy-Jean Lloyd in the titular role of Madame Flora, to a superbly acted and heartbreakingly effective performance by Victoria's Ken Drouillard as the mute Toby.

Golden-haired and golden-voiced Shari Saunders sang Monica, the Medium's gentle daughter with a tenderness and lyrical beauty, with a charm of phrasing and color that will linger long in memory.

Festival audiences had heard Lloyd in concert previously and we were prepared for the lovely vocal texture and color, but when this was placed in context with the passion of Madame Flora's anger and fear, the effect was electrifying. Lloyd is not only a gifted singer but an actress of force and fervent imagination.

Leslie Allison, Erik Oland and Nicole Duchemin proved effective as the duped clients of the medium.

Brewery strike hearings open

The B.C. Labor Relations Board began hearings today to determine if brewery workers can legally picket the liquor distribution branch's main warehouse in Vancouver.

The brewery workers set up the picket lines Friday and officials from the branch immediately applied for a cease-and-desist order. The picketing has locked virtually all of the province's supply of imported beer behind the warehouse's doors.

Members of the B.C Government Employees Union working at government liquor stores and warehouses throughout the province have agreed not to handle out-of-province beer in an effort to force Labor Minister Jack Heinrich into intervening directly in the dispute.

BCGEU director Jack Adams said the picketing — designed to force the three major breweries back to the bargaining table in the month-long contract dispute — would leave liquor stores with no beer supplies early this week.

BCGEU members working at the warehouse estimated there were about 300,000 dozen bottles of imported beer stored there, and an unknown amount in other government and private warehouses.

Beer production at Molson's, Labatt's and Carling O'Keefe has been virtually shut down since the breweries locked out their 900 employees July 25.

The union is still insisting on a two-year contract at $1.05 each year, but John Langley, president of the Brewery, Winery and Distillery Workers Union, said the workers would accept a three-year contract if other unresolved issues were improved.

Provincial mediator Ken Albertini met with both sides separately last week, but reported to Heinrich that the employers were not willing to change their offer.

Park-ride base approval

A bus connecting link and park-and-ride base on the south side of the Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre in Colwood was approved Friday by the Capital Regional District's transit planning and management committee.

The decison must be ratified by the regional board and the Urban Transit Authority.

It is expected to cost $78,000 to build eight bus bays. Another $25,000 will be needed to provide 50 extra parking spots.

THE MANAGEMENT OF ENERGY IN CANADA. ONE OF A SERIES.

ENER$AVE IS PUTTING THE HEAT ON ENERGY LOSS

Ener$ave is the name of a service. A complete, up-to-the-moment advisory service that gives you the answers on all aspects of home insulation and household energy conservation. After it gives you the questions!

Ener$ave is useful, important, and timely. What's more, it is free. And it's all yours for the asking.

Ener$ave shows you how you can implement improvements that will result in less fuel consumption in your home. Heat is money. And when heat leaks out, dollars drain away. That's what Ener$ave was formed to prevent.

How much can you save? Your home holds the answers.

To benefit from Ener$ave, you start out by asking us for an Ener$ave Questionnaire. (We'll tell you how at the base of this ad.) In it, we ask you a lot of questions about your house. Its age, size, type of construction; what kind of fuel it uses, and the amount of existing insulation. When we receive your answers, we add them to data we already possess on materials, labour, and fuel costs in your region. It all goes into the computer. And a tailor-made money-saving package for your home comes out.

That information package is called an "energy audit" and it detects where heat – and money – are leaking out. Each analysis comes with a breakdown of what it will probably cost you to put your house in better order: how much fuel and money can be saved, and the estimated time it will take for the improvements or up-grades to pay for themselves.

Because pay for themselves they do.

$100 million is a lot of saving.

Ener$ave was introduced in 1977, and since then, the people manning the busy phones and computers tell us that about 300,000 people have told them their home's "life story", and we in turn have been able to get back to them with money-saving programs and suggestions. All told, the audits have shown these Canadians how they could save $100,000,000 a year on home heating.

$100 million is just the beginning.

In 1980/81, we are looking to double the number of questionnaires handled, and homeowner audits provided.

It's easy for you to participate, just dial the toll-free number you see below. Our "HEATLINE" staff can give you on the spot technical information plus details about federal and provincial grant and loan programs.

The Ener$ave Service helps each of us do something real to better manage our energy resources. When you do it, you save a lot of money. When millions of Canadians do it, the nation saves a lot of energy. And that is one good way we reduce our dependency on unreliable foreign oil supplies. We've all got what it takes to use energy more wisely. And Ener$ave is making it easier, with the right questions and answers.

Strike traps more tourists

LE HAVRE (UPI) — Striking French fishermen clamped a new blockade on the major ports of Le Havre, Antifer and Dieppe today, halting ferries carrying 2,000 passengers to Britain and stopping other shipping traffic.

But most of France's harbors stayed open as strikers waited for results of a negotiating session.

Spokesmen for the fishermen, whose 13-day strike centres on a demand for increased subsidies on diesel fuel for trawlers, gave no reason why the Le Havre blockade was reimposed without warning.

About 35 trawlers halted shipping traffic at the central harbor at Le Havre and the nearby oil tanker terminal of Antifer, removing navigation buoys from channels.

Fishermen also reimposed a blockade at Dieppe, a crossing point for ferries to Britain.

Interior Minister Christian Bonnet described the action as "very malicious" and said it was "a very serious offense."

"It will not go unpunished," he told a television interviewer.

The 228,000-ton Greek tanker Andros Georgios was forced to wait offshore because of the Antifer blockade. Two car ferries with 2,000 passengers for Britain aboard were also prevented from leaving Le Havre.

Antifer is France's second biggest petroleum receiving terminal after Fos-Sur-Mer on the Mediterranean, where French navy tugs bombarded trawlers with water cannons and tear gas canisters to break the blockade Friday and Saturday.

At Boulogne, where the blockade was lifted Sunday pending the new negotiating session, striking fishermen switched tactics. They picketed exits from the piers, preventing the departure of 40 refrigerated trucks carrying imported fish.

When the leading vehicle tried to drive through, a striker threw a stone that shattered its windshield.

Riot police fired tear gas grenades at strikers before Boulogne Mayor Guy Lengagne arrived to arbitrate between the two sides. There were no reports of injuries.

The talks centred on government proposals to improve the efficiency of marketing fish, including possible financial support, and also tightening legislation against non-professional fishermen who sell their catch.

Latest Seattle sniff no nosegay: doctor

SEATTLE (AP) — An industrial chemical is being used increasingly by Seattle teenagers as a "legal high."

Butyle nitrite is being sold in porno book and sex-toy stores, some head shops (shops that sell drup paraphernalia), taverns and discotheques.

The liquid is considered legal because it may be sold across the counter to adults as long as the label warns the buyer against taking it internally.

Amyl nitrite, which provides the same effect and almost identical side effects, is used by some heart patients. It must be prescribed by a physician.

Dr. Michael Copass, who runs the emergency room at a Seattle hospital, says the misuse and abuse of butyl nitrite is "terribly dangerous."

"The nitrite is a vasodilator," Copass said. "People who sniff it experience a dramatic drop in blood pressure.

"You can get bigger doses than you can tolerate and it can lead to tisssue and brain damage resulting from an inadequate supply of blood to the brain. There is also a chance of kidney damage."

Lucey named by Anderson

WASHINGTON (AP) — Patrick Lucey became John Anderson's vice presidential running mate today, saying he believes the independent ticket "has a real chance to win this election."

Lucey, 62, is a former governor of Wisconsin who served President Carter as ambassador to Mexico but quit to take a senior post in the now-failed campaign of Senator Edward Kennedy.

Anderson, a Republican congressman from Illinois, said Lucey meets his three criteria: that the candidate be a Democrat, a veteran of elective politics with broad experience in government and fully qualified to assume the office of president.

Lucey told reporters that "I remain a Democrat — I have not abandoned the Democratic Party."

He said it is Carter who has abandoned the party.

This marriage was a bit batty!

FINCASTLE, Va. (UPI) — It was a costume wedding right off the comic book pages and movie screens.

The 21 words spoken Saturday by the Rev. Fred Knobloch, father of the groom and a Methodist minister dressed as Ben Obi-Wan Kenobi, one of the main Star Wars characters, said it all:

"Batman and Catwoman, Rick and Mary Anne, I now pronounce you man and wife — and may The Force be with you."

With that, Rick Knobloch, dressed as Batman, swept his bride, Mary Anne Castleman, dressed as Catwoman, into his arms and planted a kiss on her lips worthy of a comic book hero.

David Castleman, the bride's nine-year-old son, was ring bearer and portrayed Bat Mite. The best man was Joker, Batman's arch enemy, and the matron of honor was costumed as Cupid, complete with bow and arrow.

Others among the 500 who attended the wedding at the Botetourt County courthouse were dressed as the Flash, Superman, Ming the Merciless, Flash Gordon, the Green Hornet and Wasp Woman.

The bride's 83-year-old grandmother, Margaret Bobbitt, came as the Wizard of Oz.

The costume wedding was the brainstorm of the 34-year-old Knobloch, a former Air Force captain who has been a comic book and science fiction fan since he was a child.

FINALLY, A CIVIC FOR BACK SEAT DRIVERS.

Thanks to the larger new 5-door Honda Civic, back seat drivers don't have to take a back seat to comfort anymore.

MORE ROOM. Because of its longer wheelbase, back seat drivers enjoy more room as well as the ultimate convenience of their own separate entrance.

MORE COMFORT. Like all Hondas, it offers other comforting features like four wheel independent MacPherson Strut suspension, a multiposition rear seat back that folds flat plus, a full depth hatchback for easy loading and unloading. Other creature comforts include tinted glass windows all around, front reclining seats and plush carpeting throughout.

MORE PEACE OF MIND. You get child-proof rear door locks, front wheel drive for maximum traction - regardless of driving conditions, rack and pinion steering for precise handling and power assisted front disc brakes for safe, sure stopping.

Best of all, you'll still enjoy Honda's famous marriage of gas stinginess (42 MPG or 6.7 L/100 kms.) and generous performance.

The new 5-door Honda Civic.* At $5,395.00 doesn't it make back seat drivers a little easier to take?

HONDA. NO.1 IMPORT CAR 4 YEARS RUNNING. THE LEGEND GETS BIGGER.

These figures are estimates based on Transport Canada approved test methods and provide a useful comparison guide for new car models. He can probably get you together with a beauty

By PAT DUFOUR

Sandy Sandford runs what he calls a dating service for cars.

He recently formed Consumers' Auto Finders, working out of 1125 Haultain, and became a middle man for people who want to sell or buy used cars.

He got the idea when he worked for a while as a car salesman.

A graduate in psychology and sociology, Sandford says: "I saw that the customers, the public, weren't being terribly well served. They had to go through a lot of work and a lot of hassle."

Through the use of a computer, Sandford lists details of cars that are on the market and people who are looking for cars.

He says it is similar to the multiple-listing real estate service and the only one of its type, involving cars, in Western Canada.

The fledgling business now has about 200 vehicles in its inventory and Sandford says he has about 100 new listings coming in per week.

About 40 per cent of the listings are from individuals who either want to sell or buy a used car.

"We make every possible effort to sell his vehicle and make it as easy as possible," he says.

Sandford sees every car that is listed in his computer, takes pictures of it, and grades it — condition of the body, engine performance and other vital factors.

To get on his list, a customer pays $35 for 30 days.

If the car is not sold by then, Sandford checks with the client for, maybe, a readjustment of the asking price, and extends his service for another 30 days, free of charge.

Just as in the real estate business, buyers of cars listed in his inventory pay no charge.

He has some car dealers among his clientele but he says he is choosy and demands that vehicles he lists meet certain standards.

He has some advice for people shopping around for a used car.

He says it's worth the $40 it costs to have the car tested at the B.C. Automobile Association station at Pandora and Cook.

He also says people should buy a car that suits their needs, rather than their fancy.

"There is a large demand for small, economical, dependable cars — particularly Valiants — but they sell at a premium price," he says.

"There are a lot of people here who drive between 5,000 and 6,000 miles a year. They'd be better off to buy an old station wagon."

Sandford is plenty busy but plans to expand.

He's made arrangements to buy time in a larger computer system and in October or November intends to start a similar service in Vancouver.

Tourist industry day is over, says Cooper

By AL FORREST

Victoria has become overly-obsessed with the tourist industry while its key industrial jobs continue to drain away, Ald. John Cooper said today.

"The tourist industry was good to us in the 1970s but we have become too comfortable. And we have failed to notice that the tourist industry has had its day.

"It has peaked and is on the decline. If we continue to rely on it too much we will pay the price."

Meanwhile, he said, the community sits back and lets vital jobs leave town.

He cited the loss of about 200 jobs to Nanaimo if the oil tank farms go to Duke Point plus other recent layoffs, including 59 people at Victoria Press.

"I am shocked by the continuing apathy about these losses. Layoffs mean people will be moving out of Victoria."

Cooper said he will present a motion at the next city council meeting calling for an urgent dialogue on Victoria's growing economic crisis.

"We must get together now — council, the Chamber of Commerce, the Victoria Labor Council — everyone who is concerned about jobs in this community."

He said it is incredible that a community could be lulled to sleep by tourist revenues while major industries have moved out one after another.

These included: the St. Michelle winery, Bapco Paint, James Island explosive plant, McDonald's Bakery and now, apparently, the oil tank farm industry.

"Chickens are coming home to roost. When the tourists stop coming, there might be nothing left but the government."

He said it is not difficult to document the fact that the tourist industry is on the skids.

Across North America, he said, the reports show that fewer people are travelling. There is a concern about fuel costs and supplies and there is a general belt-tightening because of the U.S. recession.

But beyond that there has been a basic change in attitude, he said.

"People aren't going to the moon any more. Fewer people want to fly in a 747 at 35,000 feet. Everyone is getting back to earth."

At vacation time people are taking shorter trips. Many are staying around home.

Cooper said this trend will soon hit Victoria and, when it does, the city's economy will be in disarray because it has relied on tourist revenues while year-around industrial jobs have left town.

The city must do two things.

First, it must act now to protect the jobs it has, taking whatever action it can to head off any further draining away of industries.

Second, it must make a serious effort to attract new industries.

Cooper said the chamber must play a key role in both activities because it now is running the industrial development commission. But city council must play a leadership role by alerting the community to the urgency of the problem and by starting a constructive dialogue on possible solutions.

In case you're wondering

My sister and I have been arguing about what was originally on the corner of Pandora and Government across from the McPherson Theatre, and also what was on the site where the McPherson now stands. At one time it was a roller skating rink. Mrs. W.H.S.

The corner has a rich and varied history, according to Victoria archivist Ainslie Helmcken.

On the McPherson Theatre site stood the Pantages Theatre with a fine entrance off Government.

The building was originally planned as a business block and was started about 1912 by R.T. Elliot, a well-known Victoria lawyer.

At the time the Pantages family was operating a theatre on lower Johnson Street but it was "a bit of a dump" and the family persuaded Elliot to change his plans, says Helmcken.

The theatre underwent extensive renovations in the 60s. The work was paid for by a large bequest left to the city by the late Thomas Shanks McPherson, after whom the building was subsequently named.

Across the street, the large building now used by senior citizens for bingo games was once a theatre called the Variety.

Helmcken recalls seeing a color slide show in the early 1900s of the Indian Durbar in Delhi, an event that was held shortly after the death of Edward VII.

The theatre, however, wasn't successful. All the seats were on the same level and the audience had to strain their necks to see the shows.

After it closed — the date is forgotten but it was likely in the early 20s — it was converted into a roller skating rink. The sport was popular here at the time and Helmcken says there were several rinks about the city.

But that use didn't last many years. For a while it was a meeting place for evangelical groups but as time went on the building became more or less abandoned, a derelict, until the senior citizens took over in the early 60s.

Helmcken says that years ago Cormorant intersected with Pandora near the corner. Cormorant was dead-ended after the creation of Centennial Square. But back in the early years of this century an odd triangular-shaped building stood at the junction. The building, long gone, was once occupied by Chinese businesses and included a small opium factory.

Woman charged in hit-run

A 32-year-old woman was charged on the weekend with failing to remain at the scene of an accident after a 19-year-old woman was killed early Saturday in a hit-and-run accident in Colwood.

Irene Goodson, 2834 Sooke Road, was remanded to mid-September, police said.

The victim, Sherri Rose Stratford of Dunford Road, Langford, was walking along Station Street with her boyfriend about 2:05 a.m. when struck by a northbound vehicle. The driver stopped, then left the scene, RCMP said.

Stratford was admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital but died of head injuries at 4:46 a.m. Her companion was not hurt.

The RCMP said a woman turned herself in to the Colwood detachment at 9 a.m. Saturday. The vehicle believed to have been involved was recovered at Sooke.

B.C. looks at prod for rental housing

Housing Minister Jim Chabot is considering a provincial version of the defunct federal capital cost allowance to stimulate rental housing construction.

Chabot said in a weekend interview he suggested Ottawa reinstate the allowance at a recent meeting with federal Housing Minister Paul Cosgrove.

The allowance, dropped Dec. 31, 1979, allowed developers who built rental housing to defer taxes on the buildings for five years, providing an incentive to invest.

The B.C. government says apartment construction has slowed to a standstill since the allowance was cancelled.

Chabot said he suggested a modified form of the allowance which would apply only in provinces where there is a premium on rental housing.

"If, for instance, the vacancy rate in a province dropped below two per cent, the capital cost allowance would come into effect," he said.

Although the response was favorable, "I don't think the federal government is about to do it," he said.

"We're looking now at options that could be introduced on the provincial scene only. For example, there's the possibility of introducing a capital cost allowance program on a provincial basis only, but we need to arrange it with the federal government to ensure that they do not tax away all the benefits.

New program to teach care of the ill at home

Canadian Red Cross Society and St. John Ambulance are launching a program in B.C. to train lay people how to care for the ill in their homes.

The course covers a wide range of home care skills, including factors that determine whether an individual can be cared for in the home, and how to create a safe and therapeutic environment for the ill or convalescent person.

Basic health care is taught, including the taking of temperature, pulse and respiration rates. Lay persons are also taught how to recognize changes that might signify illness.

Dr. Wally Thomas, member adviser to the B.C.-Yukon Division of the Red Cross Society, said the project is not just aimed at care for the elderly but also for the chronically ill who will be able to stay at home rather than in hospital.

Thrust of the program is a return to the concept that a person is often much better off being cared for under the loving atmosphere of a home rather than in a hospital.

"But this program has another function and that is it can only help in bringing a reduction in the number of days a person spends in a hospital," Thomas said.

60 school supers locally selected

Sixty of B.C.'s 75 school districts will operate with locally-appointed superintendents in September, following a change in the School Act.

All boards were given the right for the first time to appoint their own superintendents. Until this year only large districts, with 4,000 or more students, had that right.

Education Minister Brian Smith said 60 districts either had locally-appointed superintendents already or intended to have one by September.

"Districts (now) will be able to get exactly the type of person they need to meet their specific needs," he said.

Police seek witnesses

Saanich police are looking for anyone who saw a single-car crash on Shelbourne Street at Derby Road at 2:43 a.m. today.

A 16-year-old youth, the only occupant of the car, is in good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Police say the car, a 1979 Mazda station wagon, collided with a power pole on the northeast corner of the intersection.

Iran claims it's nabbed Anglican-based spies

Times News Services

A spy network said to be financed by $500 million from the United States and equipped with over 600 pounds of explosives, and operating out of the Isfahan Anglican bishopric in western Iran, has been broken by Iranian revolutionary guards, Tehran Radio reported.

"At present, several members of this network who are foreign nationals have been arrested along with their Iranian collaborators," the radio said Sunday in a broadcast monitored by the BBC in London.

Tehran Radio said today the state gendarmerie announced that over the past few days its agents have discovered 1,418 rifles, 3,526 rounds of ammunition, six grenades, nearly 36.28 kilograms of opium and 14,500 packs of foreign cigarettes, in various parts of Iran. The broadcast, monitored by the BBC in London, did not say whether the cache was connected with the previously mentioned spy network.

No further details of the arrests, including nationalities, were given.

The broadcast also gave no information on how the network was alleged to have operated, nor what its purpose would have been, though the word "coup" was mentioned.

The attack appeared to be indirectly aimed at the British, a target of the Iranians since several Iranians were arrested in London for staging demonstrations.

On the political front, Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of the Iranian parliament or Majlis, announced on Tehran Radio that the new cabinet would be introduced to parliament "possibly next Tuesday."

The Majlis has been charged by Iranian strongman Ayatollah Khomeini with deciding the fate of America's 52 hostages, how in the 296th day of their captivity, once a government is formed.

Khomeini reportedly met Saturday with Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai amid reports that political infighting has erupted between fundamentalist hard-liners over the naming of the new cabinet.

Tehran Radio in releasing more details on the alleged spy network said documents, including Iranian military secrets, were seized at the bishopric along with the explosives which were to be "distributed to a number of army personnel and the leaders of the Bahai sect."

The U.S. payment of $500 million was indicated in the seized documents, the radio said.

The former leader of the Iranian Anglican church, Bishop Hassan Dehqani-Tafti, recently said from his self-imposed exile in London that some of the 800 Anglicans remaining in Iran have been murdered and others have been harassed and arrested as part of a systematic plan by Islamic fundamentalists to "discredit Christianity."

A Roman Catholic prelate recently expelled from Iran told the Irish Sunday Independent newspaper in Dublin that most of the 40,000 Catholics in Iran three years ago had fled or been expelled since the revolution toppled the monarchy of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in January, 1979. He said only about 3,000 Catholics remain in Iran.

Dublin-born Archbishop William Barden, 72, who went to Iran in 1970, said he was expelled for the "crime" of knowing Dehqani-Tafti, who fled to London after an attempt on his life.

In other developments:

— The Daily Express in London says the son of the late shah of Iran, Crown Prince Reza, is planning to establish a goverment in exile to challenge the rule of the country's spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Quoting "devout supporters" of the late shah's family, gossip columnist William Hickey said a huge ceremony was being planned — with Egypt the likely venue — to pronounce Reza as the new shah on his 21st birthday later this year.

— The official Chinese news agency Xinhua reported from Tehran on Sunday that Iranian government troops killed 133 Kurdish rebels in fighting near the town of Kamyaran in the western Iranian province of Kurdistan.

Hercules still stalks Hebrides

LONDON (UPI) — So far yogurt and bananas have not enticed Hercules out of hiding, and police think the popular star of television commercials might be getting hungry — and dangerous.

Hercules, a 2½-metre-tall, 250-kilogram grizzly bear, has been missing since he decided to go for a swim during filming on an island off the coast of Scotland last week.

When the bear snapped his lead and swam off, his owner, Andy Robin, dove in the water after him. But the $50,000-a-year television celebrity got away.

He disappeared into the dozens of little islands in the Outer Hebrides.

Half a dozen dogs, 40 soldiers, police and gamekeepers, and two girls known to the bear have not found a trace.

The military decided to call off the hunt Sunday until someone actually spots Hercules.

Robin has offered a $2,700 reward for his bear.

No-leakage sub report calms Japanese fears

TOKYO (UPI) — A Soviet freighter that came to the rescue of a crippled Soviet atomic submarine has been declared free of radioactive contamination, Japanese officials said today.

Japanese experts boarded the Meridian, immediately after it docked at Kobe port, about 480 kilometres west of Tokyo this morning.

An hour-long examination of the freighter produced no sign of radioactivity, said officials from Japan's Science and Technology agency said.

The Meridian and its crew of 57 were the first to the rescue of the 4,600-ton Echo-1 submarine which caught fire west of the Pacific Island of Okinawa Thursday.

The blaze killed nine crewmen and injured three. The Meridian took on 55 survivors and proceeded to Kobe after turning the survivors over to a Soviet supply ship that arrived at the scene Thursday afternoon.

Trailed by Japanese ships and aircraft checking for radioactivity, a Soviet tug towed the submarine through the East China Sea west of Japan's southernmost main island of Kyushu this morning, Japan's Marjtime Safety Agency (MSA) officials said.

A Soviet missile cruiser, destroyer, and submarine tender escorted the sub as it headed in the direction of its base on the Siberian coast of the Japan Sea.

The Soviets angered Japanese officials by ignoring repeated warnings against violation of territorial waters as the fleet cruised between two small islands in the Ryukyus Sunday. Japan lodged a strong protest with the Soviet Union.

Fitness reduces toll

UPPLANDS-VAESBY (Reuter) — Nine persons died and 50 were injured Sunday when the rear eight cars of an express train broke loose and jumped the tracks, Swedish officials said.

The accident happened only 10 minutes before the train was due to arrive in Stockholm at the end of a 1,287-kilometre journey from the Arctic city of Kiruna.

Prof. Anders Eklund, head of the medical team at the scene, said rescuers feared there might be other dead still in the wreckage.

He said seven bodies were found in one car which split in two when another one crashed on top of it.

The 13-car train was full with many passengers returning from northern vacations before schools open today.

"Many of the injured survived thanks to their fitness," Eklund said.

"They were returning from hikes in the north Swedish mountains."

Bo Tollin, traffic chief of the Swedish state railway company, said the train was travelling at the allowed maximum speed of 120 kilometres an hour when the rear eight cars broke loose and derailed.

Railway officials said a wheel-axle might have broken or bearings might have overheated.

Boffins scan Saturn shots

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Earthlings may soon be closer to knowing whether Saturn's rings are made up mostly of dirty ice cubes the size of baseballs.

Voyager 1 sent back 30 new images of Saturn on Sunday, but scientists said there were no surprises — the spacecraft is still about 100 million kilometres from the planet.

Scientists spent the day checking the instruments of Voyager 1, which unveiled the colorful mysteries of Jupiter last year, in preparation for its close encounter with Saturn in early November.

Its closest encounter with Saturn is expected to occur on Nov. 12,

Wests reach soccer final for third time

SASKATOON — Defending Canadian champion Victoria West is in the men's national soccer final for the second straight year and the third time in the last five years.

The Wests Sunday won the Western Canada championship with a 3-2 overtime victory over Calgary Springers.

Dan Henry scored all three goals for Wests, the winning counter being an "own goal". It was knocked into the net by a defender.

Wests, who won their second national championship here last fall, will defend their Canadian championship in Halifax starting Sept. 13.

Wests won their first national championship in 1976. London Boxing Club of Victoria captured the honors in 1975.

Wests defeated Saskatoon 1-0 in the semi-finals Friday while Calgary advanced to the final with a 2-1 win over Winnipeg.

Winnipeg defeated Saskatoon 5-2 in the consolation final.

Gaffield collects two titles; Mary Alford singles queen

By MAX LOW

All those things the other players have been saying about Chad Gaffield were right!

The summer-long, seventh annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament ended in glorious weather Sunday at Oak Bay's Henderson Park and to nobody's great surprise, the lanky, bearded Gaffield was the big winner.

The 29-year-old University of Victoria history professor who has played a lot of competitive tennis in Toronto used a big serve to overwhelm 18-year-old Steve Majocha 6-0, 6-2 and capture the prestigious men's singles title. And then Chad teamed with wife Pam to defeat plucky youngsters Jay Wilson and Cory Aspden 6-3, 6-4 and collect the mixed doubles crown.

Gaffield was equally devastating in Saturday's semi-finals when he eliminated Wilson 6-1, 6-4. Majocha, after going out 6-3, 6-4 in the junior boys' singles semis to Rich Folk, ended the hopes of 42-year-old baker Joe Renz, beating him 6-4, 6-2 to reach the men's final.

Folk, runner-up to double singles winner Kerry Chan in the boys' final last year, took the junior event Sunday with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Bob Brown. Bob made it to the final with a 6-1, 6-2 win Saturday over 15-year-old David Blair.

Biggest surprise of the windup weekend, though, was the performance of South African-born Mary Alford.

A round behind everyone else because of a holiday trip to her homeland, Mary flew back into Victoria late Friday and was on the Henderson Park courts at 11 a.m. Saturday, playing Linda Lee in a delayed women's singles quarter-final match.

Mary won that one, 9-2, and then, still suffering from jet lag, took a quick nap on the grass before going back on the court to defeat hot favorite Pam Gaffield 6-3, 7-6 in the semi-finals.

Lynn Derry got past her friend Marg Mainwaring 7-5, 6-3 in the other semi but Mary Alford was as steady as ever in the final Sunday, beating Lynn 6-4, 6-4 to take the title.

Apart from Gaffield, the most convincing winner of the weekend was little, red-haired, 14-year-old Correne Gillies who breezed past a bewildered Angela Heimlich 6-0, 6-0 in the semis and then used her two-fisted backhand to great effect in storming to a 6-1, 6-2 win over 17-year-old Carol Lauzon in the junior girls' singles final. Carol needed two hours to oust her former schoolmate Cory Aspden 6-4, 7-5 in the semis Saturday.

It was the mixed doubles, however, that produced some of the best and most exciting tennis of the tourney windup.

Kerry Chan, trying for the fourth year to win the only title that has eluded him, and his talented young long-time partner Charlayne Joe looked well on their way to victory in the semi-finals when they took the first set 6-2 and led 5-2 in the second. But Wilson and Aspden battled back to take the second set 7-5. Again Kerry and Charlayne shot into a 3-0 lead in the third set but once more their opponents came from behind to win it 6-4.

In the other semi-final, Chad and Pam Gaffield met with stiff opposition from Alf Hass and hard-hitting Jill McKay in the first set before winning that one 7-5. The more experienced Gaffields took the second set 6-2.

Nerves overcame Cory Aspden somewhat in the mixed final and although she and Jay Wilson put up a good fight, the Gaffields stayed in command throughout.

A record total of 285 players took part in the tourney, designed for public parks players.

Since its inauguration seven years ago, the tourney has been co-sponsored by the Times and the Vancouver Island Tennis Association (VITA) and Sunday's finals were umpired by VITA president Horace Kempster and vice-president Nigel Gillett.

Trophies were presented to each winner and runner-up by Victoria Press advertising manager Brian Hobbs and all the champions took home new racquets, presented to them by Ken Holman, owner of Centre Court Racquets in the Stadacona Centre on Pandora Avenue.

Blues' owner thinking ahead to next season

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Victoria second baseman Joe Lorenz grounded into the game-ending play Sunday, and one fan was quick to suggest the Blues' infielder may figure in a piece of trivia in the not-too-distant future. Like:

"Who was the last player to bat in the last professional baseball game in Victoria?"

No need for Bruce Lowther, one of the city's better-known trivia buffs, to get excited.

On the heels of Sunday's 6-3 loss to Salem Senators at Royal Athletic Park, the Blues will need something of a miracle finish to wind up on top in the Northern Division and qualify for the Northwest League's championship playoff series.

The loss dropped Victoria three games behind the division-leading Bellingham Mariners, and the Blues have only four games remaining — all on the road. They wind up their schedule with two games in Medford and a pair in Eugene.

But with or without the possibility of playoff action bringing the Blues back into Athletic Park, club-owner Bob Peden isn't writing off his franchise. He says he'll be back next season.

He'll have to come back without Van Schley, the Los Angeles player-agent who supplied Victoria with the field talent for a third straight, and disappointing, season.

"I'd say there is about a 90 per cent chance I won't be returning," Schley said Sunday. "A lot of things would have to change. I still think Victoria can be a successful franchise, but not under some of the present conditions."

He didn't elaborate.

Schley admitted he would like to have outright control of a franchise in the class A league, and hinted the possibility might come up in Bend, Ore., or in one of the other centres with established teams.

Peden, who "knows now how Charlie Finley feels," also concedes "changes are needed" but he feels "fairly certain" he will again try to make pro ball a success in Victoria.

Although Peden has been critical of fan support, it is almost certain over-all attendance will exceed the totals of the past two seasons since professional baseball returned to Victoria after an absence of 25 years.

Still, it has been a losing proposition for Peden, who purchased the franchise from brothers Lynn and Jim Chapman.

However, Peden said he talked to a baseball enthusiast in Ohio who "wants, very much, to own a baseball team. After talking to him, I would be very interested in taking on a partner."

"It has been a learning experience," Peden added. "But when I bought the team, I said it wasn't going to be a one-shot thing. We're going to look at all aspects of the operation, including major league affiliation.

"If we can get an affiliation agreement, then I have no doubt we'll be back next year."

Mauch resigns as Twins' pilot

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Moments after Gene Mauch announced his resignation as manager of Minnesota Twins following an American League baseball game Sunday, rookie outfielder Rick Sofield sat on a chair in the Twins' clubhouse and cried.

"We were all hoping it wouldn't happen," said Sofield, who said the players knew about a news conference called for 10 minutes after the game, a 3-2 loss to Detroit Tigers.

"I wish I could hit three thousand and make him stay," Sofield said. "I would do anything for the man.

"But something made him quit and it's sad because we need him."

But Mauch, the dean of major league managers with 21 years of service, said that not only didn't the Twins need him, they would be better off without him.

"For a lot of years, I threw around a lot of words to a lot of players," said Mauch, 54. "They were words which meant a lot to me — words like pride and dedication."

"It's time for these players to hear some new words from a new voice. I hate the word 'quit' and I don't think that's what I'm doing. I'm not satisfied that I'm making contribution enough to stay around and it irritated me to the point that I suggested to (owner) Calvin Griffith that it would probably be a good idea for the team to function in a new atmosphere.

"He agreed."

Third-base coach Johnny Goryl was named interim coach. He will inherit a team which is 54-71 and more than more than 25 games behind the Kansas City Royals.

Mauch's move came a day after Whitey Herzog, who replaced Ken Boyer in June, signed a contract to manage the St. Louis Cardinals through the 1982 season.

Charley Finley's A's get the Levi label

OAKLAND (AP) — A name that adorns millions of blue jeans around the world is now affixed to Oakland A's, as Levi Strauss & Co. has become the American League baseball club's owners.

They pledged to create baseball fever in Northern California.

Company officials, whose purchase of the club from Charles O. Finley for $12.7 million was announced Saturday, said they would like to see popular manager Billy Martin — accredited with tripling the A's attendance this year — sign a long-term contract.

"But talking about it is premature right now," said Roy Eisenhardt, who will become A's president when Levi assumes control Nov. 6. "We'll have to talk to (Martin) about his long-term plans."

Martin, with one year remaining on his contract, said he definitely wanted to renegotiate his contract, but said: "I want to wait awhile before we talk about it."

Eisenhardt, son-in-law of Levi's board chairman Walter A. Hass Jr., said that the company would not maximize profits at the expense of the community.

"It is the responsibility of a business to give back to the community some of what it takes out," Eisenhardt said. "Levi Strauss is a classic example of this kind of thinking, and Oakland A's will be run with the same philosophy."

The team's new owners must renegotiate the lease with the Oakland Coliseum. The lease signed by Finley when he moved the club from Kansas City in 1968 has seven years left, with an option for another 20.

Eisenhardt said he would use the negotiations to try to improve stadium lighting, access for the handicapped, locker room facilities and parking lot security, and that he expects no trouble with the Coliseum on these things.

The speedy completion of the deal between Levi and Finley in a month's time after several years of unsuccessful attempts by Finley to sell the team was due largely to Cornell Maier, board chairman and president of Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corp., said Oakland mayor Lionel Wilson.

Without Maier's determination, Wilson said: "We wouldn't be here with this wonderful family owning the A's."

Whitecaps meet Seattle

Times News Services

Clyde Best scored two goals and figured prominently in the other as Portland Timbers downed Vancouver Whitecaps 3-2 in a North American Soccer league game Saturday night at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

Although the defeat in front of 32,301 fans gave the defending NASL champions only an even split of their 32-game regular season schedule, a goal by Ray Hankin with less than seven minutes to play assured them of the No. 1 wild card playoff berth in the National Conference.

Whitecaps will meet Seattle Sounders in the first round of the playoffs at Vancouver's Empire Stadium Wednesday night.

Second game will be played in Seattle Saturday night.

The goals by Best overcame a gift goal scored by Whitecap winger Carl Valentine after only 53 seconds of play and raised Best's season production to 11 goals.

Four of Best's goals have been against Vancouver.

Best also set up Dale Mitchell for what proved to be the winner at 74 minutes.

The two points picked up by the Whitecaps raised their season total to 139, same as Tulsa Roughnecks, but Vancouver gained the first wild card berth by virtue of more wins.

It was the Whitecap's worst season since 1975 when they were 11-11 and placed fourth in a five-team division. In their championship season last year they were 20-10 for 172 points and in 1978, their best year in regular season play, they were 24-6 for 199 points.

On Sunday New York defeated Rochester 5-0, Edmonton downed California 1-0, Toronto edged Atlanta 3-2, Washington beat Minnesota 3-2 and Detroit edged Fort Lauderdale 3-2.

On Saturday, the Memphis Rogues, in their final game, swept away Houston Hurricane 6-1, Dallas Tornado edged Chicago Sting 3-2 and Los Angeles Aztecs nipped San Jose Earthquakes, 2-1.

Veteran forward Tony Field scored third goals and added two assists in the Rogues' farewell performance before 11,884 fans.

The Rogues have been sold by Memphis businessman Avron Fogelman to Nelson Skaldanian, who plans to move the club to Calgary. The league's owners have yet to approve the sale.

Willard earns share of a national crown

WEST VANCOUVER — Dale Willard of Victoria and Michael Young of West Vancouver combined to win the under-16 doubles title Saturday in the Canadian Junior Tennis Championships. Willard and Young defeated Hatem McDadi of Toronto and Chris Pridham of Oakville, Ont., 6-0, 6-2.

Glenn Michibata of Toronto scored an upset in the men's under-18 singles final by defeating top-seeded Martin Wostenholme of Ottawa, 6-2, 6-0.

Then, Michibata and Wostenholme won the under-18 doubles with a 6-2, 6-3 win over Laird Dunlop of Victoria and Ric Bengtson of West Vancouver.

Diane Blondeau of Quebec City won the women's under-18 singles final, 7-6, 6-2, over Edmonton-native Sara Pappelbaum of La Jolla, Calif.

The women's under-18 doubles was won by Jill Hetherington and Fatima Ravat, both of Toronto, 7-5, 6-2 over Blondeau and Carol Bertrand of Portland, Ore.

Pridham won the under-16 singles title by beating Martin Laurendeau of Montreal 6-7, 6-4, 6-3 and Libby Wilkinson of London, Ont., won the women's under-16 singles with a 6-3, 6-2 decision over Helene Christiaanse of Surrey. The women's under-16 doubles went to Marianne Groat of St. Catharines and Kellie Haddén of Thornhill, Ont., 6-1, 6-7, 6-3 victors over Wilkinson and Carling Bassett of Toronto.

Kevin cuts down critic with five-goal outburst

Kevin Alexander responded to criticism from New Westminster coach Al Lewthwaite the best way he knew how Saturday night.

The Western Lacrosse Association scoring champion pumped in five goals as the Victoria Shamrocks defeated the Salmonbellies 12-9 before a crowd of 2,101 at Memorial Arena to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven final.

The fourth game will be played tonight in New Westminster and the fifth game comes back here Wednesday. If a sixth game is necessary, it will be Thursday in the Royal City.

Alexander had been panned for his defensive play by Lewthwaite following the Rocks 13-9 loss in Game Two Thursday. He refused to comment on the disparaging remarks Saturday. He did his talking on the floor. He scored twice and assisted twice as the first period ended 4-4, connected once in the second period — which ended in an 8-8 tie — and scored twice more in the third period as the Shamrocks pulled ahead 12-8.

Alexander is the league scoring leader and his scoring prowess is expected but the Rocks got some additional scoring punch from a surprising source Saturday.

Captain Larry Bell, a defensive standout who scored only eight goals all season, scored three goals, including the winner early in the third period.

"Playing on a line with Danny Green and Norm Baker really helped," said Bell in explaining the sudden burst. "I put my stick out and they put the ball in it."

Baker, playing one of his best games since his late season return, had five assists and Green assisted once.

Alexander had a sixth goal taken away late in the third period when he was incorrectly called for being in the crease.

Victoria goaltender Larry Smeltzer, who made 32 saves, wasn't having one of his better outings but he came through in the third period and the Shamrocks jumped into an 11-8 lead early in the third period with three goals in two minutes and 28 seconds.

"The way they were playing me I was getting caught halfway," explained Smeltzer. "In the third period I decided to just guess them and it worked."

"We let down in the third period," said Lewthwaite.

Jeevan Dillon, Rhys Wickes and Art Webster had good defensive games for Victoria and Jim Lynch scored two goals and five assists and Tarey Pollock scored twice.

Stone's run stalls

Greg Gicas stole Gordie Stone's chance for a fourth straight main-event victory Saturday at Western Speedway.

Stone had won the last three stock-car main events and he was leading with two laps to go in the 35-lap feature but Gicas passed him on lap 34 for an upset victory before a crowd of about 2,000.

Gicas made a nice move to get under Stone on turn four and he won the sprint to the finish by about the width of a bumper.

Garth Armstrong finished third and Jim Smith was fourth.

Dale Taylor, second in the point standings, was involved in a major crash early in the second lap. He went into the pits with suspension problems, got back into the race and finished about seventh.

The feature was a chaotic affair with numerous red and yellow flags.

The jalopy program was dominated by Rocky Collins, returning to action after a couple of weeks' rest.

Collins lowered his own track record from 20.28 to 20.12, won the trophy dash and main event, but lost a chance for a sweep when he finished second to Keith Lee in the fast heat.

Al Goldie won the consolation race, Lloyd Wilson took the second heat and Keith Cahill won the first heat.

IMPORTANT SAFETY WARNING
to owners of older John Deere Lawn and Garden Tractors

Maintaining the safety equipment on your older John Deere Lawn and Garden Tractor can be especially important. The original boot (or cover) for the battery's positive post on Model 60, 70, 100, 110, 112, 120 or 140 Tractors manufactured from 1963 through 1974 may have suffered from age or may have been lost or damaged. And if that positive battery post is not properly covered, there is danger of a spark causing a fire and bodily injury if you accidentally touch a metal gas can to the positive battery post when refueling the tractor. A more serious fire can result if you are not using a safety-approved gas can.

If you own one of the above models, John Deere wants to make absolutely certain that your tractor has the battery's positive post properly isolated. To make it easy—and safer—for you, we will send you a new cover, free. Just fill out the coupon provided below and mail it to the address shown. It comes complete with installation instructions and is not difficult to install. But if you prefer, after you have received your kit, make a date with your John Deere Lawn and Garden Tractor dealer and he'll install it for a small service charge.

Remember, safety and maintenance go hand in hand. The operator's manual can help you. Read it again. Keep your tractor as safe as it was when it was delivered.

It could be the most important thing you do today.

Victoria cyclist captures road-racing championship

MONTREAL — Bernie Willock of Victoria is the Canadian road-race cycling champion.

Willock earned the title Saturday by winning the 170-kilometre national road-race in a time of four hours, 15 minutes.

Paul Tettamanti of Vancouver won the silver medal and David Hodgeson of Peterborough captured the bronze while Hugh Hardin of Vancouver was sixth and Tom Morris of Victoria finished ninth.

Willock and Tettamanti broke from the pack at the 70-kilometre mark. They led by as much as 3½ minutes and were 20 seconds ahead of the pack when they sprinted to the finish.

Watson first over $500,000

Greg Olson of Aylmer, Que., and Edwina Kennedy, an Australian who put together the best rounds of her career for a devastating romp, are Canada's amateur golf champions for 1980.

Among the professionals, Tom Watson, Beth Daniel and Peter Jacobsen, a new name from Portland, Ore., were the weekend's big winners in golf.

Olson recorded his triumph over the unyielding 6,827-yard, par-71 Ashburn course in Halifax to win the men's Canadian men's amateur championship Saturday. He is the first Quebecer to win the men's national title since Gordon Taylor in 1932.

Vancouver's Richard Zokol, 27, posed the only serious threat to Olson on the final day. He started three strokes back of Olson, took the lead briefly with a birdie at nine, then four-putted the twelfth to fall off the pace and finally wind up fourth.

Kennedy was the whole story in the national women's tournament at London, Ont.

She scored an 11-stroke victory, leading from the close of the first round Wednesday to the tournament's finish Saturday.

"It was my best tournament by far. I've never played so consistently as I did here," she said.

After she had carded consecutive 72s over the first three rounds, Kennedy saved her best for last with a final round 71 to waltz to a nine-under-par 287.

Kennedy's victory was so overwhelming that Jane Crafter, also from Australia, was almost as pleased at finishing second as Kennedy was at winning.

Kennedy became the first foreign player to win the title since Debbie Massey of the U.S. ended her three-year reign in 1976.

Low Canadian honors went to Barbara Bunkowsky of Campbellville, Ont., who shot a 74 for a 305 total, good for fourth spot.

Watson, the winner of the "World Series" at Akron, Ohio, paused in the contemplation of his achievements to consider the problems of Jack Nicklaus.

"I'm worried about his back," Watson said immediately after he'd nailed down his seventh victory of the year with a five-under-par 65 to finish with a 270.

Nicklaus, 40, who capped his brilliant comeback with victories in the U.S. Open and Professsional Golfers' Association championship, had injured his back while practicing before the final round Sunday and was forced to withdraw.

Nicklaus, in obvious pain, went back to his Florida home for more examinations. His ailment was diagnosed as a severe muscle spasm in the lumbar region. He will not play again this season, but had made that announcement prior to his injury.

The $100,000 Watson collected from the big purse put his winnings at $510,258 to become the first man to go past one-half million in a single season. He set the old record at $462,636 last year.

Jacobsen, a 26-year-old from Oregon, rolled in a 15-foot birdie putt on the final hole of the $250,000 Buick Open at Grand Blanc, Mich., to win his first title after four years on the PGA tour.

Jacobsen's 12-under-par 276 was one stroke better than Mark Lye and Bill Kratzert.

In Denver, Daniel, who dropped three strokes to par on the front side but rallied back on the second nine, posted an even-par 72 for a six-stroke victory in a $150,000 LPGA tournament. It was Daniel's second tournament triumph in as many weeks and her third of the season.

Canadian Sandra Post and Jane Blalock finished tied for second.

ALSO IN GOLF: Victoria's Bob Beauchemin fired 67-71-68 — 206, 10 under par, but had to settle for second-place money of $2,000 in the Kellough Classic at Thunder Bay . . . The big winner ($3,000) was Paul Kennedy of Brampton, who won with a 12-under 204 . . . Mark McNulty of South Africa became the new West German Open champion by shooting a final-round 69 for an eight-under-par 280 and a one-stroke victory over Britons Neil Coles and Tony Charnley . . . John Phillips of Lake Oswego, Ore., won the celebrity-filled Danny Thompson Memorial at Sun Valley, Idaho, with a 36-hole net score of 122 . . .

Als dump veterans in youth movement

Times News Services

Montreal Alouettes have scored only 82 points in six Canadian Football League games this season while allowing the opposition 121 to leave them last in the Eastern Conference.

And 34 points of the club's total output came from placekicker Don Sweet, who was the team's leading scorer from 1972 through 1979.

But Sweet, 32, the squad's all-time leading scorer with 900 points, won't be around to contribute any more when the Als entertain Toronto Argonauts Tuesday.

Sweet, along with 33-year-old defensive tackle Gordon Judges, offensive tackle Dan Yochum, 30, and defensive halfback Larry Uteck, 28, was cut by the Alouettes Saturday.

Vice-president Robert Berger, general manager Bob Geary and head coach Joe Scannella all insisted the move was made in an effort to get younger players into the lineup.

But Yochum, who retired before training camp when he reached an impasse in contract negotiations with Geary only to return for the second game of the regular season, wouldn't buy that explanation.

"Garbage," said Yochum, voted the CFL's outstanding offensive lineman in 1976. "It comes down to the fact that by signing (linebacker) Tom Cousineau, they over-extended their budget."

"To compensate for his big contract, they don't want to spend money and they're cutting corners."

Cousineau, first draft choice in the National Football League in 1979, spurned Buffalo Bills to sign a multi-year contract with the Als at $200,000 annually.

In Vancouver, the injury-riddled B.C. Lions have signed a pair of linemen as the team prepares to meet Hamilton Tiger Cats Tuesday at Empire Stadium.

Offensive tackle Darius Helton and defensive tackle Franklin King have been signed.

Helton, 25, six foot, three inches and 260 pounds, comes from North Carolina Central. He was with the Lions during pre-season.

King, 23, six feet tall and 260 pounds, was released by CincinnatiBengals Monday.

In Regina, the Saskatchewan Roughriders obtained Campbell Hackney, a Canadian outside linebacker, from Hamilton Tiger-Cats. And in Hamilton, the Tiger-Cats released Lewis Jr., son of the former Winnipeg Blue Bomber great. Lewis earlier was released by Calgary Stampeders.

Trooper Seven victor

Times News Services

Washington-bred Trooper Seven won the $125,700 Longacres Mile as attendance and betting records at Longacres Race Track at Renton, Wash., were shattered Sunday.

Gary Baze guided the winner to the inside rail as the field of 10 horses rounded the first turn. Trooper Seven won by three lengths with a time of 1:34 2-5 and paid $10, $4.80 and $3.30.

Island Sultan took second followed by Tilt The Balance.

A record $420,499 was wagered on the race, while the crowd of 20,102 fans topped the record of 19,827 set last year. The day's mutuel handle was a one-day record $2,367,266.

At Vancouver Saturday, longshot Incumbent Victory survived erratic running and came back with a rush to win the $20,000-added B.C. Nursery Stakes.

The 6½-furlong race for Canadian bred two-year-olds produced one of the closest mass finishes in recent memory, as only 3½ lengths separated Incumbent Victory from The Cong, 10th and last horse in the field, at the wire.

Incumbent Victory returned $68, $20.60 and $11.30.

Attendance was 15,805 and the handle $1,147,287.

At Edmonton, Foncier charged though a sloppy track to capture the Speed to Spare Championships by 1½ lengths.

Ridden by Ron Hansen, Foncier's come-from-behind success was worth $22,056, boosting his season's earnings to more than $55,000.

Foncier was bought for just $1,800 by trainer Ronnie Brock, and sold as a two-year-old for an undisclosed sum to Gordie Pedersen of Calgary.

Tap Shoes won the $86,250 Hopeful Handicap at Saratoga, N.Y., with a two-length victory over Lord Avie.

Elsewhere, Ribbon won the $84,000 Arlington Oaks at Arlington Park, Foretake won the $56,990 Longfellow Handicap at Monmouth Park in East Rutherford, N.J., and Teddy Doon captured the $53,750 Cabrillo Handicap at Del Mar, Calif.

Victoria's seniors miss main event

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Roy Glickenhaus shot a net 68 to pace defending champion Panama to victory in the 17th annual World Senior golf team matches Saturday.

Panama posted a two-day 428 to defeat the Phillipines by six strokes at the Broadmoor Country Club. The United States was third at 437, followed by West Germany 439 and Canada, the first-day leader, with 447.

The two-day team play was used as qualifying the top 32 players for this week's individual championships. Match play began today and will end with Friday's 18-hole championship.

The only Canadian qualifying for the championship flight was William McGhee of Coquitlam, who shot a 78.

Among the other Canadians — all from Victoria Golf Club, Gordon Verley shot a net 82, Ray Cranston an 80 and Jake Peters a 79.

B.C. sportsman dies

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dan Kulai, a well-known Vancouver soccer player, official and member of the British Columbia Sports Hall of Fame, died Friday after a lengthy illness.

Born in Ladysmith in 1907, Kulai started his soccer career as a centre forward but switched to goal because of a knee injury. He helped New Westminster Royals win the Canadian championship in 1928 and 1929.

That team was later chosen as the outstanding Canadian soccer team of the first half of the 20th century.

Kulai started a career as a referee in 1940 and in 1961 became the first Canadian chosen to the FIFA list for World Cup play.

Although best known for soccer, Kulai was an outstanding competitor in baseball, handball, cricket and basketball. He was named to the B.C. Sports Hall of Fame in 1970 as an athlete and builder.

Kulai is survived by his wife, a son and a daughter.

Chuggers lift title

Chuggers broke loose in the second half Sunday to bomb Barons 40-13 in the final of the Labatts-Juan de Fuca touch football tournament at Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre.

Chuggers, who defeated Keg 49-0 in a semi-final game earlier in the day, led 21-13 at the half. Barons had to go through double overtime to trip Crimson Tide 30-24 in the other semi-final after playing to a 24-24 deadlock in regulation time.

Awards were handed out to Brian Huber of Razorbacks (best defensive back), Rob Moe of Crimson Tide (best offensive back) and Razorbacks (most sportsmanlike team).

Results of preliminary play Saturday:

Kings 35, Hawks 0
Chuggers 26, Razorbacks 25
Hawks 6, Keg 26
Dolphins 46, Raiders 0
Blue Devils 0, Barons 72
Razorbacks 19, Tigers 18
Kegs 42, Blue Devils 0
Dolphins 7, Crimson Tide 21
Kings 6, Barons 36
Chuggers 39, Tigers 0
Raiders 6, Crimson Tide 32

Swim attempt fails

DOVER, England (AP) — Carole Lee, 24, of Sacramento, Calif., failed by one mile in her first attempt to swim the English Channel on Saturday. Lee was picked up a few minutes from the French coast while on the same day Des Renford, 52, of Australia recorded his 19th successful crossing.

Alberni gains final by sweeping Buds

Port Alberni Athletics must now play a waiting game.

The mid-Island squad swept the best-of-five Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League playoff semi-final against Port Angeles Budweiser with a 5-0 shutout Sunday at Central Park.

Port Alberni won the first two games of the series 6-0 and 8-1 at the same site Saturday.

Victoria Athletics lead Tally-Ho Inn 2-1 in the other series after winning the third game 3-0 Sunday. Earlier, Tally-Ho edged Athletics 1-0 in the eighth inning of a game which had been halted because of darkness after seven innings Thursday.

The fourth game is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Tuesday with a fifth game, if needed, set for the same time Thursday.

Grey tops Memorial

Mark Grey of Powell River, riding a 349 Montessa, collected first place in the expert category in the 11th annual Rick Wells Memorial trial staged Sunday by the Victoria Motorcycle Club on their property off Happy Valley Road.

Grey accumulated 85 points under the reverse-scoring system.

Martin Spriggs, aboard a 250 Yamaha, edged out Peter Wille, who rides a 350 Bultaco, for second place.

Both Victoria riders came up with 113 points but Spriggs had 15 "cleans" to 13 for Wille.

Cablevision squares final

BURNABY (CP) — Burnaby Cablevision defeated New Westminster Salmonbellies 10-9 Sunday to even their best-of-seven Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League final series at a game apiece.

Keith Keller scored both Burnaby goals in the third period to provide the winning margin. Doug Deschner and Lyle Robinson also scored twice for Burnaby while Doug MacIsaac led Salmonbellie scorers with two goals.

Play resumes Tuesday in New Westminster with the winner of the series representing the West in the Minto Cup series for the Canadian championship.

Burnaby triumphs

PROVOST, Alta. (CP) — Burnaby won the Canadian Bison baseball championship Sunday by defeating Quebec Elites 8-3 in a game cut to 4½ innings because of rain.

Big payoffs delight longshot appetites

It was the day of the longshot Saturday at Sandown Raceway.

And for cagey bettors with an eye for picking an exactor, it was a lucrative day indeed.

Exactor returns exceeded $200 in four of the 10 races, climbing over the $300 mark in two of those — thanks to those longshots.

Take the fourth race for starters. A 5/8-mile dash, it was won by 20-to-1 shot Shadows Charlie, driven by Carl Toupin. It was only the four-year-old's third win in two years and paid a whopping $42.40 in first-place money.

Combined with Lou Virag's Hidden Time, which came second, Shadows Charlie helped produce the day's biggest exactor, $346.70.

In the featured ninth race, Maple Winnie, driven by Keith Quinlan, and Holridge Elaine, guided by John Hollingsworth, were the winning tandem. They edged crowd favorite Flash Fire, Joe Hudon's energetic youngster, which finished third.

Maple Winnie paid $11.20 to win but it was Holridge Elaine which upset the odds. Starting the race at approximately 40-to-1, the brown mare paid $15.10 to place. The exactor: $319.50.

Spindrift Two, driven by Phil Coleman, and TV Pilot, with Tom Burke in the sulky, combined for a payoff of $299.50. Spindrift Two, a 10-year-old veteran, was the surprise in that race, paying $36.70 to win.

And contributing to the big day was the eighth race, won by Call N Raise, with Jim Gagnon at the reins. Here By Chance was second. The one-two finish paid $221.10.

By contrast, the 10th-race triactor payout was a modest $106.90. Little Pence, Woodys Kat and Governors Star Boy (8-3-2) were the winning trio.

Joe Hudon's win behind Little Pence gave him four winners for the afternoon.

A crowd of 1,846 wagered $150,705.

Racing resumes Tuesday with post parade at 5:35.

Dicker, Campbell capture lawn titles

Marg Campbell of Victoria West is the "champion of champions" and Daisy Dicker of Burnside is the Victoria women's novice lawn bowling champion.

Dicker went undefeated in seven matches to capture her novice title at Burnside while Campbell posted a 6-1 record in the round-robin champions event.

Doreen Green of Oak Bay and Joan Farnham of Lake Hill tied for second behind Campbell with 5-2 records while Vee Hewin of Victoria, Florence Reiter of Canadian Pacific and Nancy Baker of Burnside tied at 3-4, Marge Jones of Nanaimo finished 2-5 and May Shephard of Gordon Head was 1-6.

Jill Spear of Vic West was second to Dicker with a 5-2 record, Gail Hodgson of Oak Bay, Ruby James of Victoria, Bernice Grant of Nanaimo, Lillian Chalmers of Canadian Pacific, Jennifer Blythe of Nanaimo tied at 3-4 and Elsie Arter of Lake Hill finished at 0-6.

Other Canadian housewives may bemoan inflation, but Donna Lee Kennedy doesn't give it much thought. The Vancouver mother of three last year banked about $60,000, received diamond and gold jewellery, as well as a second Cadillac, for being one of the top 10 Canadian sellers for an American-based cosmetics firm. Kennedy said she is now earning more than her husband, a mechanic, and she is also in the running to be named "Queen of Unit Sales" at the cosmetic firm's Canadian convention in Toronto.

Mae West, who lured millions to the theaters during the 1930s with her sultry "Come up and see me sometime," is recovering at Good Samaritan Hospital from a mild concussion she suffered when she fell out of bed. Stanley Musgrove, a friend of the 88-year-old actress, said she was admitted to the hospital Aug. 11 and was expected to be released in another day or two. "She's doing fine," Musgrove said. Miss West celebrated her 88th birthday last week in the hospital.

The guy stuck in the chimney wasn't Santa Claus — it was Richard Garcia failing in his attempt to get into his brother's house.

Garcia, 20, forgot his key and since he didn't want to waken anyone, he decided to climb in through the chimney. All was going well until he reached the damper and then he got stuck. A neighbor heard his yells and tried to pull him out but wasn't able to move him. The fire department also tried to pull Garcia out, but couldn't. Finally, the firefighters used two power saws to cut a hole in the chimmey so Garcia could climb out.

It takes a lot of guts to get in the belly-bumping ring at Mountain Charley's tavern. Any recognized athletic skill would probably be a handicap, and no previous experience is necessary. The object of the sport, which they call "bellybucking" at Mountain Charley's, is to bounce your opponent out of the ring — with your hands behind your back. "It's great sport," says Tom Powell, 365-pound champion. "It sounds like we're a bunch of buffoons but we're not. It's very serious. Guys get hurt doing this." Powell won the state championship recently by larding it over a 396-pound contender. "He just flew out of the ring. I couldn't hardly believe it," said the champ modestly, sipping a beer.

Dear Readers:

Tired wrote: "At age 50, after 30 years of marriage, I would like to forget about sex altogether. Believe me, I've paid my dues. I suspect that many (if not most) women get very little physical satisfaction out of sex; they just go through the motions because they want to do something for the men they love. I can't believe I'm the only woman who feels this way. Please poll your readers, Abby, and if they're honest, I think you'll find I'm right."

Well, here's an update on my survey, and there are literally bushel baskets of mail that are yet to be tabulated.

Some sample comments:

"There must be something wrong with Tired. I'm 81, and when my husband was alive I thought sex was the most fun in the world, but now that I'm a widow, it's kind of hard to fine someone to play with — especially in a small town where everyone knows your business."

Having Fun at 81

"I'm 51, and now that our kids are out of the house we can make love when we want, make all the noise we want, and I don't have to worry about pregnancy. This is the best time of my life!"

Happy

"How can I enjoy sex when my husband comes to bed with his teeth out, needing a bath, and belching onions in my face? I'm 55 and agree with Tired."

No Name

"At 50 I got nothing out of sex. I thought I went frigid, but something happened somewhere around 53, and now we're more compatible sexually than we've ever been. Hard work and money worries make a man a poor lover."

N.Y.C.

"I've been a widow for 12 years. My husband and I both enjoyed sex until he died. He was 90. I could still enjoy it, but who would have me?"

June, Age 81

"I was told that a decent woman wasn't supposed to enjoy sex, so I felt guilty when I did. My husband died, and when I married again at 46, I learned how to enjoy sex without shame or guilt. Sex with the right man is wonderful."

Laura, Age 77

"I agree with Tired. Even a hooker gets to retire."

Tired II

"I disagree! I'm 68 and my husband is 69, and the older he gets, the better he gets!"

Ready and Eager

"I agree with Tired. Sex is much ado about nothing. I say, 'If you want something done right — do it yourself!'"

Coming to Chinatown, a golden horse

Neither Campbell River nor Courtenay boast a Chinatown, and although Cumberland's microcosm of the Orient was once second only on the West Coast to San Francisco's, that time was long ago. Today, nothing remains. Even the once-swarming houses have vanished into the earth. So on our trips to the city, we like to take a turn along Fisgard Street, which is the living, beating heart of Victoria's Chinatown.

You can buy a good, durable wok there for the cooking of stir-fried vegetables. Or a wooden-handled cleaver with a broad and heavy blade, that wonderfully versatile mainstay of the Chinese cook. There too, my wife renews her supply of dried mushrooms, an exotic which when soaked and incorporated into chow mein or chop suey tastes like no other of its kind.

It's good to stroll in the sunshine along that wide and busy thoroughfare, with a pause here to buy some minor item, and another there to pass the time of day.

On our last trip, we loafed our way on to Fisgard Street at noon. Win looked at me doubtfully, then said, "I suppose we could have lunch."

"Great idea!" I agreed heartily.

My dear one continued, "We could go up to Don Mee's and have dim sum." Then she added a rider. "That's if you'll remember you're on a diet and not dive into the food like a starving pelican every time the food-wagon stops at our table."

We climbed the stairs to Don Mee's and indulged in dim sum, a perambulating Chinese smorgasbord of sinful opulence. Then, happy if rather too well fed, we drifted on to Morley's, a treasurehouse from which have come some of our most prized possessions.

Our flamboyant red-and-gold teapot came from that Chinatown store. It was there, many years ago, that we found the lovely statuette of Kwan Yin, goddess of mercy, who graces our house.

On the strength of old acquaintance, we ventured into a dim, cool storeroom at the back of the place, where we found proprietor Henry Lee transferring hundred-year eggs from a dragon-decked tub. Henry and his wife, Ruby, have built Morley's into a fine, prosperous business. Also, they have plans for the future.

Pretty soon, Henry told us, they mean to open a new restaurant in Chinatown.

"What are you going to call it?" I asked.

Henry smiled. He said, "The Golden Horse."

I asked whether they were borrowing the name from a Chinese war-horse on a screen which I remembered as one of Henry's art objects.

Oh no, he told me. The name came from an actual horse which he once owned.

"My first horse," he said. Then, passing black eggs through his hands from the dragon tub, he told us the story.

Henry's horse was beautiful to the eye. Its breeding showed in its clean and speedy lines. It carried its head well. All in all, it promised a stylish turn of speed.

So Henry bought it, and was saddened to learn that his racehorse, in terms of track performance, was a turtle.

This was a disappointment, because he had hoped for great things from the beast. But he stuck with it, entering it in this race and that in the hope that eventually it would wear out its losing streak.

But this didn't happen, and finally in disgust, Henry let it be claimed.

The horse passed out of his life. Fate, though, had tossed Henry a curve.

"You know," he said, "a funny thing happened. Once it was gone, my family and I realized we loved that horse. We missed it. We wanted it back."

He watched his chance and claimed the photogenic if torpid steed back. And something even funnier happened. Henry's horse picked up its heels. Somewhere in its being, it discovered an ambition to be out front. It began to run.

Encouraged, Henry entered his horse in the season's top handicap at that year's Sandown autumn meeting against stern competition.

You've guessed it! Henry's horse won.

"It was very nice," said Henry, tossing a hundred-year egg in his hand. "Winner's circle, roses, handshake from Jack Short who was announcing his last races at Sandown. So that's why we're going to call the new restaurant The Golden Horse."

A worthy name. We'll eat there some day . . . preferably when this accursed diet is behind me!

Meet Bonne Jean from Tokoroa town

elizabeth forbes

Where is the town of Tokoroa?

You don't know? Neither did I until I talked to Bonne Jean Pellikan, who is visiting here from New Zealand.

That surname — Pellikan?

Its German by way of Switzerland, and in Germany the name of the large bird with a long bill and big food pouch is spelled just like that, only with one L.

Tokoroa?

Mrs. Pellikan, who has lived there the past 10 years, says its a mill town about the centre of New Zealand's North Island, and very close to Rotorua, where the Maori Village is situated.

Last time she was in Victoria, about 12 years ago, husband Walter was with her. This time he was too busy to make the trip.

He is in property, as they say in Tokoroa. Here, in Victoria, that means real estate.

His interest is mainly in ownership of flats. Again, to you and me, that means apartments.

He also owns and maintains what his wife calls a village, eight miles out of town, covering 25 acres and with the same number of houses.

It was established in 1948 by the Dairy Board for its people. Later it was sold to a mill for their workers and when the mill put it on the market in 1971, Pellikan bought it.

The village is too far out of Tokoroa to receive maintainence help from Town Council, so he must do much of the work himself, even in keeping the dirt roads in front of the houses in good condition.

"He's extremely versatile," Mrs. Pellikan says. "He can renew water and sewage facilities, do plumbing, electrical work, carpentry and painting."

Plans for some of that work must be approved by qualified inspectors, she points out "but my husband designs the changes and once he has permission, goes ahead with the work."

In the beginning she helped, especially in cleaning and preparing the houses for new tenants after they became vacant. Now he even does that.

Growing interests in property eventually led to a need for a town office and its there that Mrs. Pellikan works today.

"I take all the phone calls, answer questions, meet tenants who like to pay rents personally and I handle as many details as I can in a friendly, informal way."

As president of the Tokoroa Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA) she also does some business for that dedicated group from the office.

There are a number of service organizations for men and for women in Tokoroa.

Pellikan was a Jaycee and he is now an active member in Kiwanis.

She belongs to the town's Business and Professional Women's Club, with some 90 to 100 active members.

Although progress may appear to be slow, women are gradually gaining equality out there, she believes.

"Right now we have two women on our Town Council and there are any number of women working outside their homes in business, professions and in industry."

Bonne Jean Pellikan was born in Hamilton on New Zealand's North Island, into a family with the Scottish name of Hogg.

They moved to Rotorua when she was about two years old, and she attended school there.

"Our home was close to the Maori Park. Many of my playmates were Maori children. I went to school with them and I have close friends among them today."

Early grown-up years saw here start nurses training there, before joining the staff of a small 20-bed hospital in Auckland where she stayed for nine years before returning to Rotorua to work in a doctor's office.

Shortly afterward she met and married Walter Pellikan, an immigrant from Germany, and six years later they moved to Tokoroa.

At present Mrs. Pellikan is on a three-month holiday in this country.

In Victoria she is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Willy Nielsen, at their Begbie Street home.

"I met Ingrid Nielsen when we were both on staff at that Auckland hospital," she says with a reminiscent smile, "and we've kept up a close friendship ever since."

Here's cocktail that's a real painkiller

By DR. BOB YOUNG

If you ask you local barkeep for a Brompton Cocktail all you are likely to get is a blank stare. Every nurse, however, is familiar with this drink, and many think it is one of the better methods of treating chronic severe pain.

The mixture was first devised about 1896, and was used extensively at the Brompton Chest Hospital in London. Although the ingredients vary from place to place the name "Brompton Cocktail" has persisted. The basic formula includes morphine or heroin, cocaine, alcohol, flavoring and chloroform water.

At present the use of heroin in clinical medicine is forbidden in North America, and morphine is usually the narcotic that is employed in the mixture. The alcohol may be in the form of sherry, vodka, or other liquor, and at times the flavor of the liquor allows the exclusion of other flavoring agents.

The alcohol has several functions. It tends to improve the mood of the patient and it enhances the palatability of the cocktail. It also has more practical function as it keeps the mixture sterile by preventing the growth of yeasts and other organisms.

Surprisingly patients seldom become addicted to this mixture, even if they have to use it for months or years. It has been found that requests for increased dosage by the patient is usually due to a true increase in pain rather than the development of tolerance.

There is truth in the statement that "Patients in pain crave relief from pain, not a psychological high from narcotics." The Brompton Cocktail, in use for almost a century, remains a useful adjunct in the management of chronic pain.

Brompton mixture is usually reserved for patients who have terminal conditions accompanied by severe pain. It has the advantage of oral administration (allowing use at home), effectiveness in controlling pain, and readily adjustable dosage.

Morphine is the major pain-killer in the concoction. The cocaine may enhance the mood of the patient, and is also important in counteracting the sedative effect of the morphine and the associated respiratory depression.

Some doctors question the usefulness of the cocaine, and this ingredient is omitted by many prescribers.

This system cuts shopping bills

the fourth quarter

Swapping shopping tips with readers has become a way of life for me. I do a column on saving in the supermarket and back come your letters telling me of ways you make the shrinking dollar go a little further.

Formalizing the rather informal system for saving that I long have advocated is Bill Oldfield's Market Master Shopping System, what Bill tells me is a "systematic way to save up to one third of your current grocery bill".

That is a startling claim. For an investment of $9.05 you can put it to the test; even if you save considerably less than the "one third" figure it should not take long to get your money back.

Bill says over 60 per cent of shoppers do not make shopping lists and those who do rarely stick to them. This can result in heavy and costly impulse buying. Supermarkets operate with the knowledge that most shoppers remember accurate prices on only a relatively few of the hundreds of products they purchase over the weeks.

The huge range of products, multiple offers (such as 3 for 79¢ versus 2 for 59¢) and price juggling by the stores further confuse the picture and make intelligent comparative shopping difficult.

All supermarkets, Bill emphasizes, rely heavily on impulse buying which, he estimates, represents some 50 per cent of purchases.

"Supermarket chains are fiercely competitive with each other — in everything but the 'regular' prices," he says. "Most stores make great efforts to match regular shelf prices with those of the competition. It is on the weekly advertised 'specials' that shoppers can save if they go about it scientifically.

"Specials range over most types of products used in your household. Top-grade, brand name specials are consistently and frequently offered at better prices than can be had from buying in bulk or buying 'no name' products. Every week dozens of specials are available in stores near you.

"Every three or four weeks literally hundreds of specials become available, including most of the items you use. Products are rotated through the supermarkets' 'specials cycle', reappearing regularly.

"But specials are not always very special. There are three distinct price levels in supermarkets: 1. shelf prices; 2. special prices; and 3. BEST PRICES (the lowest price at which, over a period of time, you can purchase an item).

"The Market Master is a convenient shopping tool to assist the shopper, through price consciousness, to become a smarter consumer and achieve significant savings."

Market Master is available for $9.05 (including postage and handling) from Bill Oldfield, 168 Samuel St., Kitchener, Ont. N2H 1R1.

Written for CP
By K. R. S. RAJAN

NEW DELHI (CP) — The 19-year-old bride, a city-bred girl, and the 56-year-old bridegroom were walking around the sacred fire. An invited gathering of 200 people was witnessing the traditional Hindu marital ceremony in a village 100 kilometres from the Indian capital.

Three times around and they would have become — as Indians like to put it — life partners.

Suddenly a group of 10 young women burst into the decorated house shouting, "Down with forced marriages" and "Women are not for buying."

They threw leaflets around and someone switched off the power, plunging the house into darkness. The bride ran away.

The "unequal marriage" was foiled.

Several feminist groups in India are campaigning against older men marrying younger women. The term unequal has not been properly defined but broadly covers age differences of more than 25 years.

In the last six months, a number of such marriages have been thwarted by social workers and the brides were apparently happy to be liberated.

Kasum Deshpande, a social worker in Maharashtra State in Western India, said she and her co-workers stopped a 76-year-old man from marrying a 18-year-old girl. Later, they found her a 24-year-old husband.

Deshpande said almost all unequal marriages take place because the parents of the girl are too poor to give dowry money to the husband. "The older the man the less he will demand by way of dowry. For instance, a 70-year-old man may be prepared to wed a girl of 20 without asking for a single cent."

But some social workers concede that the problem of old men "grabbing" young brides by exploiting their poverty has been over-dramatized. In many instances girls have preferred to marry men far older than themselves and, what is more significant, are leading happy lives.

"With the cost of living going up, many women think it is more important to marry a well-settled man than to risk throwing one's lot with a man without a steady job or enough money," said Janaki Gopal, a Madras social worker.

Gopal, mother of three daughters, said she knows of a woman who married a 55-year-old man 15 years ago when she was 16 and describes her husband as "God's gift to me."

The idea of outsiders raiding marriage ceremonies and breaking up marriages is repugnant to Gopal. She is also against any legislation to prevent unequal marriages.

Several members of parliament belonging to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's ruling Congress Party say it is more important to ban the giving and taking of dowry.

Said one MP: "Often . . . it is the so-called modern young man who turns out to be greedy."

Your horoscope

Astrological Forecast for Tuesday, August 26, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Project that was delayed will now get into production. You'll have greater emotional and financial security as result. Emphasis on secret agreement, necessity for discretion, clandestine romantic liaison. Cancer, Capricorn persons figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You learn where you stand in romance department. Don't hang onto past; future is bright and awaits only your first step towards it. Aries, Libra natives play significant roles. Puzzle pieces fall into place — what appeared a haphazard pattern becomes meaningful.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You gain chance for added independence of thought, action. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Basic ambitions can be fulfilled; one who can "pull strings" is in your corner. Career gets boost. Standing in community is elevated.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on teaching, learning, following through on hunch. You are capable now of perceiving potential. Know it and look beyond the immediate. Plan for travel, education and open lines of communication. Capricorn, Aquarius persons figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Highlight versatility, display sense of humor, deal with Gemini, Sagittarius persons. Delve beneath surface indications. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Answers to money dilemma are made available. You could strike pay dirt.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are asked to provide sources — be positive of material and make necessary corrections. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio natives figure prominently. Become familiar with legal rights and permissions. It might not be wise to co-sign, even for friends or relatives.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Clash of ideas provides stimulation. Express views in positive manner minus arrogance. Member of opposite sex is fascinated and you'll be aware of it. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Morale is boosted and vigor makes a comeback.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on gifts, luxury items, possible purchases of "glamor stocks." Taurus, Libra and another Scorpio figure in scenario. New outlet is found for creative energies. Emphasis on romance, speculation and dealings with persons who have "young ideas."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Obtain professional appraisal of property, other possessions. What you own may be more valuable than originally anticipated. Define terms, strive for greater self-understanding. Pisces, Virgo natives figure prominently. A "secret" meeting dominates scenario.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will be "in touch" with individual who once played an important role in your life. Accent on calls, messages, short trips and a special financial arrangement. Cancer and another Capricorn play significant roles. Relative makes unusual request.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are relieved of money burden. Payments can be completed and you benefit from special interest rate. Aries, Libra natives figure in your personal scenario. Take precautions where valuables are concerned. Don't invite loss through carelessness.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): By taking initiative, you get chance to erase past errors and gain greater independence. Emphasis on creativity, new contacts, expression of love. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Circumstances favor your efforts. Stand tall for principles.

IF AUGUST 26TH IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you seldom do things halfway — when you start something you usually finish it. You have knack for bringing priorities into sharp, clear focus. You are a natural organizer and you have tremendous executive capabilities. Your views are definite and you express them in a forceful, dynamic manner. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. You recently experienced emotional letdown; you are on your way back and are due to overcome financial setback. By October, you will be in charge of your own affairs. You are precise, loyal and stubborn. If single, marriage could be on horizon.

Not married to their work — but sort of MONTREAL (CP) — Most companies still insist that married couples not work in the same department and preferably not at the same branch, but things are changing with the increasing number of working wives and the resulting increase in couples employed at the same company.

Working together rarely means laboring at adjacent desks, but the Royal Bank of Canada, Air Canada, Canadian Pacific and IBM, among others, have recently relaxed marriage regulations.

One couple's secret to coping with the arrangement is avoiding lunchtime get-togethers.

"It's too much, lunch as well as breakfast and dinner," said Sofie Georges, a Polish-born travel consultant who works with her husband, Mounir.

Whether to lunch together is usually a minor consideration. The Georges work in a small travel agency and are in closer physical proximity than most couples.

More important are the problems of separating business from home lives, keeping shop talk to a minimum and widening circles of friends.

Normand and Diane Bujold work for Bell, but at separate buildings. She is an internal auditor and he works as a supervisory technician in network services. They drive to and from work together daily, but otherwise seldom see each other during the day.

They believe, as several couples do, that the advantages of working together outweigh the drawbacks.

"I wouldn't want to work in the same department as Normand, but working for the same company is fine," says 44-year-old Diane.

"We also have a lot of the same friends at the company and with our seniority, we don't have to worry about getting our holidays at the same time."

Richard and Nicole Parent work for the Bank of Nova Scotia, at different branches. He is a manager of operations, while she works as an accountant.

Breakfast signals the end of their daytime contact. They have separate cars and travel to and from work separately.

Nicole, aware that her husband's position could lead to charges of favoritism, says she is careful not to go to him with any business problems. She is also purposely vague about her husband's job, and several of her friends don't know what he does.

The situation for working couple Leonard Lafleur and Monique Collard is more unusual. When she says goodbye and heads to work, he knows he won't be seeing her for three to six days — and the situation is reversible.

They work for Air Canada. He is a flight supervisor and she is a flight attendant.

Monique flies about 70 hours a month and is away from home about 12 days. Leonard also makes several flights a month.

They arrange their schedules around each other to be apart the mimimum amount of time, and about twice a year he books onto her flights.

quilting

By KATHY FARYON

Christmas bazaars are on the horizon. Perhaps you were lucky enough to attend a Christmas-in-July sale?

If you're like most or us, new ideas on fund-raising are always welcome — not only at home, but for your social club, church or favorite charity. Symphonies, art galleries, hospitals and schools all need to earn extra dollars for special projects.

Here are some suggestions that may help:

— Christmas Patchwork Templates, Pak No. CD-5354, is a pattern of six shapes in Christmas designs . . . holly, candy cane, star, bell, angel and gingerbread man. (According to latest reports we are now supposed to say "gingerbread people.")

Because these shapes are plastic, they are reusable and washable. They may be used for tracing onto fabric, leather, paper, glass and plastic. You can use them for fabric tree ornaments, cookies, quilting stitch designs (on aprons, tea cosies, placemats, etc.), stained-glass ornaments to hang in windows, felt appliques, beanbag toys, baby toys, table decorations or fireplace mantle decor.

Beginning with these basic shapes for "everything Christmas," you just add the decorations and the setting. They'll get you started well in advance of bazaar deadlines.

— Quilt Your Christmas is a new book by Kay Bailey, who, you will remember, put dozens of quilting stitch designs into an easy-to-use booklet format, Quilting Stitchery. She's got a pattern for a tree skirt, pin-cushion, hot-dish carrier, vest, puff wreath, tree ornament, and a wonderful, cathedral-window gift box just the right size for a little piece of jewelry for a special person. (Using satin or velveteens in the "windows" would make it unique.)

If the people in your group pooled their fabric scraps, you would hardly need to purchase very many supplies to make up most of the items shown.

— Between Thimble & Thumb, is a new book by Shirley Botsford which is chock full of gift suggestions, complete with excellent diagrams, full-color photos, techniques and step-by-step directions. She shows us how to apply piping and button-loops which add flair to simple projects (AND helps them sell!), how to do cut-away applique which is very effective, how to make quickie placemats with a string-quilting method, and a very simple fabric box with ties at the side which could be whipped up easily.

There are also patterns for a travelling treasure case and mock smocking, which can be made very quickly. You can think about making a special case for a quilt you plan to give, or raffle, using the instructions for the fabric box.

There are lots of ideas. Your fabric choices, and special additions will make the difference.

Happenings: The Quilters' Guild of North Dakota announces a three-day juried show to be held Sept. 15, 16, and 17 at Fargo, N.D. Both new and old quilts will be featured. For further information and entry blanks, write to Charlotte Smith, Pres., at P.O. Box 1774, Fargo, N.D. 58107. A non-profit organization with a membership of 100, the guild welcomes beginners, experienced quilters, and collectors.

There's no profit in collecting old cars

TORONTO (CP) — The consummation of a love for antique cars is rarely a profitable affair, but that doesn't deter collectors who put time, money and affection into their four-wheeled fantasies.

"Treat the hobby of cars as any other pursuit and forget the dollar signs," said Herman Smith, historical consultant to Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd., Oakville, Ont., and the owner of a 1904 Model C Ford, a 1913 Model T and a 1931 Model A.

John Cybulski's turquoise and ivory-colored 1956 Chevrolet sports coupe is an example of how unprofitable these cars can be.

Cybulski paid $5,500 for the car a year ago and since then has spent another $1,500 on it, not counting his many hours of labor.

He estimated its resale value is about $7,000, meaning he hasn't made a profit on the purchase, and accounting for inflation has lost money on the deal.

But making money wasn't the reason he bought the car — Cybulski wanted the 1956 Chevrolet because it was the car he drove when he got his driver's licence.

Donald Parsons, manager of Herb Parsons Auto Tops of Toronto, recommended that investors chase old clocks and organs instead of autos because the cost of restoring most antique cars runs into many thousands of dollars.

Most collectors tinker with the engine of their cars and do minor repairs, but few can perform the major tasks of restoring old cars — reupholstering, repainting and plating. These repairs cost many thousands of dollars.

Parsons said to recondition the upholstery "and all the goodies that go with it costs about $3,000."

Reginald Beer of Reg Beer Coachbuild in Bolton, Ont., said a vintage Bentley or Rolls Royce costs $4,000 to $5,000 to paint, about 10 times the cost of painting today's mass-produced cars.

Before the painting begins, parts such as fenders, hoods and doors must be removed and sandblasted to bare the metal, unlike new cars in which new paint is merely applied on top of the old, Beer said.

He said a special paint is used and 10 to 12 coats are required. After the paint dries, the surface is sanded with a fine-grade emory cloth and hand polished.

Watchdog Richards Report #184. Fred Fulton, so long it was nice knowing you during the years you were employed with the Colonist Printers and the Victoria Press. Seen-In—Passing: Sign inside the future premises of CFAX's new home at 825 Broughton Street, "Opening soon, Mel's Place, Licensed". Congratulations go to the Municipality of Oak Bay in the way they sold 26 lots by auction last Tuesday night. They received $70,000 for Lot 2 which is the lot directly behind a lot owned by a famous CJVI radio personality. The City of Victoria should possibly use this method of raising City owned [illegible]

ARE YOU LONELY, DEpressed; can't think straight, life in doldrums, troubled or financial problems? Jesus Christ is the answer. As He said in His own words, "if you ask me to come into your heart and ask for ANYTHING, it will be done". So why don't you just try it, after all what have you got to loose? Maybe I don't, but God still loves you. To me, it's worth paying for this ad.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: Would anyone knowing the whereabouts of Louise Sweeney, please contact Laverne MacFadden at 2280 Kingsway, Vancouver, B.C. (604)430-3411. Please call collect. It is a matter of personal concern.

Buy good seed for that lawn

garden notes

In the course of my series on the creation of a new lawn and its subsequent care I have expressed the view that in the long haul, investing a bit more money and buying the best quality grass seed is a wise move.

Aside from the more obvious reasons, another justification for buying good, fine seed when you are sowing your lawn is that many of the coarser, cheaper and more common varieties grow tough, fibrous blades that are difficult to mow. Instead of cutting cleanly, they tend to shred. The resulting shredded ends turn brown, giving the lawn a permanently diseased, burnt-out look. The common varieties of perennial ryegrass are examples of this sort of cheap, coarse grass.

I have also been an advocate of mowing a lawn high but if for some reason you desire your lawn or part of it to be cut low, say for a bowling green, you would have to mow frequently, ideally every day, at least every second day and with a good reel mower. Otherwise, you will end up cutting into the crown of the plant and either injure or kill off patches of the lawn. Again disease and weeds will result.

And it's a good idea, as a matter of course, to alter your mowing patterns. Don't always mow in the same direction and this is especially applicable if your mower is a heavy one. To avoid shredding the grass blades, keep your mower blades sharp. This is really the single most important factor that determines the appearance of your lawn — a clean cut.

It's impossible to state exactly how much to water a lawn because conditions vary so much from place to place and from year to year. The commonly given rule is to apply one to 1½ inches a week. Light, sandy soils in hot weather will need more; heavy clay soils will need less.

The aim of watering is to keep the entire root zone dampened but not saturated with water. Frequent, light waterings are bad news for grass plants which respond by maintaining a shallow root system. It must keep its roots close to the surface because that is where the moisture is. Shallow roots make for weak, disease-prone plants.

Apply water gently and slowly and aim at giving a half-inch of water each time. You can measure the amount of water given this way: place four cans with straight sides at various distances from the sprinkler and turn on the water for 30 minutes. At the end of this watering total up the number of inches in all four cans and divide by four.

This will give you the amount of water given the lawn in half an hour. If the total water in the four cans was, for example, an inch, then the average depth of water in each can would a quarter-inch. So to apply a half-inch of water, you would have to increase the watering time to one hour.

To wrap up this series, let's dwell for a moment on the problem of growing an adequate lawn in a shaded area. Given certain conditions, this can be done but the site must have some good light because grass, like anything else, won't grow in the dark. In a wooded area, it's a good idea to trim off all the lower tree limbs. This pruning serves both to allow more light into the site and to improve air circulation in the area. Shaded lawns can become disease-prone and good air movement is the best fungicide available.

Clear out any underbrush and water your shade lawn more than lawn sites fully exposed to the sun. The reason for the increase in water is that the tree roots use up such a lot of the soil's moisture that the grass roots can't compete unless they are watered well. If shade lawns are allowed to dry out, they won't come back to life the way lawns planted in sun can.

Keep your shaded lawn site carefully cleaned. Rake leaves off in the spring and fall and overseed in the fall if the lawn seems thin. Again, if you are planning to seed a shade lawn, buy the best combination of shade-tolerant fine fescue and bluegrass that you can find for this is not the moment to go Scrooge. Cheap seed will not succeed anywhere and much less on a difficult site.

And when you mow your shade lawn, mow high to keep the crowns of the plants well protected and to leave as much foliage intact as possible to manufacture food for the roots.

NDP MPs plan hearings series

The dozen New Democratic Party members of Parliament from B.C. will hit the road next month for a province-wide tour to hold public hearings on a wide range of concerns.

The MPs begin their tour in Vancouver on Sept. 15, come to Victoria the next day and then will split into two groups for the balance of the itinerary which includes stops in Duncan, Nanaimo, Kamloops, Kelowna, Castelgar, Kimberley, Surrey and Williams Lake.

The theme of the tour which will wind up on Sept. 20, is Issues of the Day: Economic, Social and Constitutional. The MPs will also focus on specific issues in each community they visit.

Interested groups and individuals are invited to submit briefs. The number to contact in Victoria is 386-8497.

Members of the tour group are Jim Fulton (Skeena), Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam), Lyle Kristiansen (Kootenay West), Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-the Islands), Ted Miller (Nanaimo-Alberni), Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East), Sid Parker (Kootenay-East Revelstoke), Nelson Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap), Svend Robinson (Burnaby), Mark Rose (Mission-Port Moody), Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River), and Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway).

Campbell denies hand in 'finger'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dan Campbell, former top aide to Premier Bill Bennett, denied on the weekend he helped alter the boundaries of a Vancouver riding following a royal commission on redistribution.

Campbell said the news media "believes unsubstantiated innuendo more than official reports."

He said in an interview at his home on Cortes Island he has no intention of explaining his side of the affair. He decided not to talk to the media a year ago when he was forced to resign amid allegations of campaign spending irregularities.

The riding map change added a parcel of pro-Social Credit support to Vancouver-Little Mountain, held by then-provincial secretary Grace McCarthy, now human resources minister and deputy premier.

Dubbed "Gracie's Finger," the area was part of redrawn B.C. ridings resulting from a 1978 one-man royal commission into electoral reform headed by Eckardt, a former chief provincial court judge and unsuccessful Social Credit candidate.

"I haven't the foggiest idea how it (Gracie's Finger) got there," Campbell said.

Statements by electoral commission worker Vi Barton last week linked the names of Campbell and McCarthy to the affair.

Dale Mearns, another commission staffer, also said she delivered an envelope full of electoral maps from Campbell to Eckardt, adding that Campbell said he had drawn them himself.

Attorney-General Allan Williams agreed the maps were delivered, but said Eckardt was outraged and rejected them. An internal investigation ordered by Williams earlier found no wrong-doing by party officials but the recent revelations have brought accusations of a coverup.

Campbell said he feels there is a witchhunt going on in the Eckardt affair.

"I don't know what the motivation is, but I suspect it's got something to do with over-eager reporters," he said. "It's been like that ever since Watergate."

Meanwhile, officials in the attorney-general's second investigation into alleged interference in the Eckardt commission have discovered oaths of secrecy signed by commission members interviewed in the first investigation have gone missing.

The A-G last week ordered an investigation into a charge that commission members signed backdated oaths of secrecy.

CAMPBELL
. . . 'haven't the foggiest'

Gary Lauk (NDP — Vancouver Centre) said in the legislature that anyone who swears an oath knowing it to be wrong — in this case because it was dated on a day other than the date on which it was signed — commits perjury.

Anyone who knowingly administers the oath or orders it to be administered commits the offence of suborning, or inducing, a person to commit perjury, said Lauk, a lawyer.

Barton told the first investigation ordered by Williams the commission staff was required to sign backdated oaths.

Barton says she believes the oaths were sent to Ian Fraser, then financial services administrator in the accounting branch of the provincial secretary's ministry.

But she said Fraser has told her he can't find them.

Fraser, now controller for the ministry of the provincial secretary, said he is not sure he received them. He said they may have been forwarded to the Provincial Archives. But an archives spokesman said it doesn't appear the oaths of secrecy had been received.

Ernie LeCours, a former Social Credit MLA and party member for 45 years, has called for a public inquiry into possible political interference in the Eckardt commission, and says heads must roll to clear the party's good name.

LeCours said inquiries held into the controversy have been questionable.

"If there is nothing to hide, why doesn't the government have a full, open investigation into the whole matter," he said.

An MLA for Richmond between 1962 and 1973, and a former aldermen, LeCours said he was concerned that all Social Credit party members are being implicated in allegations.

"It's rather regrettable that the government should take the abuse it's taking now in order to protect people who don't deserve such protection."

LeCours said the government is in serious trouble because of the dirty tricks affair and the Eckardt commission controversy.

"But if they got rid of the people who are causing the problems, they would be in fine shape."

Protesters pull Afghan on Odessa

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 200 people shouting "Soviets go home" greeted the cruise ship Odessa when it docked in Vancouver harbor Sunday afternoon.

The protestors said the Canadian government should ban the Soviet ship from Canadian ports. The Odessa, which travels up the B.C. coast to Alaska, has been banned from docking at U.S. ports while Soviet troops are in Afghanistan.

The protest did not appear to bother the vessel's 500 passengers, mostly Americans and Canadians who were taking advantage of the vessel's cheap cruise fares.

Well soon in control

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — Special equipment needed to tame a natural gas well blowing out-of-control since last Thursday was brought to the site over the weekend.

Today Quasar Petroleum Ltd. will try to cap the well, 130 kilometres southwest of Dawson Creek, said production manager Jeff Errico.

The well is spewing half a million cubic metres of toxic sour gas a day but Errico said none is escaping into the atmosphere because it is being burned.

He said the apparent cause of the problem is a hole in a 4½-inch pipe.

Ferry sinks:40 die

CIUDAD DEL CARMEN, Mexico (AP) — A ferry carrying a bus, passenger cars and several cargo trucks sank near here late Friday night, drowning at least 40 persons, authorities said. Up to 40 people were unaccounted for.

9-month baby taken and thrown in ravine

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — A husky 37-year-old maintenance man faces a first-degree murder charge in the death early Sunday of his neighbors' nine-months-old baby, taken from his crib and thrown 25 metres into the Credit River ravine.

Homicide investigators with Peel Regional Police were awaiting the results of an autopsy today that will determine whether the boy was alive when thrown from the Queen Elizabeth Way bridge over the river.

Staff Insp. James Wingate, head of the homicide squad, said the body of John Massie, stripped of his diapers and sleepers, was found on the river about 8½ hours after his parents, John and Linda Massie, reported him missing from their townhouse.

Police have arrested James Wilson Brown, married and the father of three grown children. He lives next door to the parents of the dead child.

Massie, 29, who works in the payroll department of a Mississauga company, had been at a backyard barbecue with his wife and neighbors in the courtyard just outside their townhouse. Mrs. Massie, 28, had put the baby to bed early in the evening and had checked him several times, police said.

At about 1:15 a.m., she looked in again and discovered the crib was empty, Wingate said. The townhouse doors had not been locked during the evening.

Brown, who worked part-time as a truck dispatcher, was arrested by two detectives less than two hours after Massie called police.

By mid-morning, a police search of the area under the bridge was underway and the baby's nude body was found on the grassy east bank, almost directly under the north side of the bridge.

Woman taken 2nd time

CALGARY (CP) — Police in southern Alberta were still searching Sunday for Karen Sirdar, 33, of Calgary who was abducted for the second time in as many months and her abductor.

Police said they are seeking the man accused in the first abduction of Ms. Sirdar, and said he may be armed and dangerous.

Ms. Sirdar disappeared Thursday after being picked up at her home by a man posing as a taxi driver. Police say they believe the cab was driven by the woman's former boyfriend who apparently obtained it from a friend who was on holidays.

Ms. Sirdar was also abducted July 7 by a man with a knife who dragged her from her bedroom. She was freed unharmed 14 hours later.

A suspect was charged in provincial court July 8 with kidnapping, possession of a weapon for purposes dangerous to the public peace, and break and enter with intent to commit an indictable offence.

The defendant was ordered locked up, but was released July 23 on $1,000 bail.

Bloc troop manoeuvre staged near border

GDANSK (AP) — Strike leaders said today the new purge in Poland's Communist leadership and promise of democratic union elections will not bring an immediate end to the walkouts by more than 150,000 workers on Poland's northern Baltic coast.

Gdansk Radio reported that the strikes along the Gdansk coast continued today, and most plants and ports remained idle. Workers expressed a cautious degree of encouragement, and awaited the government's next move.

Meanwhile, Eastern-bloc troops were gathering for a Warsaw pact military exercise at an East German site just 96 kilometres west of northern Poland.

A Bulgarian artillery unit reached the manoeuvres site today, hard on the heels of a Czechoslovakian contingent that arrived Sunday, the official East Berlin news agency ADN reported.

The military exercise, which will involve 40,000 troops from six countries of the Soviet-led Warsaw pact, is scheduled for mid-September and concerns Western defence analysts who fear Moscow may use the manoeuvres to cover a military move to end the strikes — a ploy used in the invasion of Czechoslovakia eight years ago.

First Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski returned to Gdansk to arrange a second meeting with strike leaders, government sources said. Jagielski held an unprecedented meeting with the strike leaders Saturday.

Jagielski said the government will consider relaxing some aspects of censorship and increased news coverage of the strike, but he rejected the strikers' demand for an increase in the average monthly pay to $237 from $170 to offset rising meat prices caused by an end to government subsidies July 1.

And in an effort to end the 12-day-old strike, Communist Party leader Edward Gierek announced the firing of Premier Edward Babiuch and eight other top officials Sunday, and promised that union officials would be elected from among candidates nominated by the workers.

It was the biggest purge since Gierek came to power following the 1970 price riots in Gdansk that toppled party chief Wladyslaw Gomulka and left 50 dead.

Gierek also promised "fully democratic, secret elections with an unlimited number of candidates" to replace the government-appointed trade union officials in all factories where the workers want them.

But he rejected the strikers' demands for free trade unions and political reforms such as the right to strike, an end to censorship and the release of all political prisoners.

"We will go on striking," Leszek Walesa, head of the central strike committee, told 2,000 strikers at the Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk. "Only free trade unions can make us happy."

However, some of the strike leaders appeared to welcome the appointment of the new premier, Jozef Pinkowski.

Court fight over patriation?

OTTAWA (UPC) — A move by Ottawa to unilaterally patriate the constitution would result in the provinces launching court action against the federal government, Manitoba Premier Sterling Lyon warned on the weekend.

"I'm among the 78 percent who believe that ideally the constitution should be patriated to Canada and we should have an amending formula so that we can amend it ourselves," Lyon said in a weekend interview on CTV's Question Period.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has said he would consider unilaterally patriating the constitution if no progress was made at the first ministers' meetings in September.

But Lyon said the meetings will not be "a make or break final doomsday for Canada" and talks may well go on for another two to three years.

"We are prepared to carry on ... but not with false deadlines in mind or with the idea that if Mr. Trudeau's particular schedule isn't met ... the whole of Canada is going to come crumbling down," Lyon said.

The premier also said he and the other premiers were under the impression the September meetings would be one of a series of meetings which would eventually resolve all 12 constitutional issues before them.

Lyon said if the federal government ignored provincial demands to settle on an amending formula before going to London, the provinces could take legal action.

"I would think that before the federal government took unilateral action that this would be a very unique and unusual thing to do and they could expect legal and other ramifications from the provinces," he said.

However, Lyon said he was "optimistic" the premiers will reach "some measurable agreement on five, six, seven or eight" of the items on the constitutional agenda.

Justice Minister Jean Chretien said in Montreal today the federal government is "going to London" for a new constitution if it can get agreement on half the 12 items it is currently discussing with the provinces.

Chretien told a news conference Canadians are fed up with 53 years of fruitless constitutional talks and want action.

The federal government wants Canada to have the power to amend its own constitution. The British North America Act now can only be amended by an act of the British Parliament.

Meanwhile in Quebec, Premier Rene Levesque said Sunday a confidential federal memo outlining a strategy for unilateral patriation of the BNA Act proves that Ottawa is only playing games with the provinces in constitutional talks.

"Ottawa's action has already been thought out in advance," Levesque said of the memo, whose contents were published by an Ottawa newspaper last week.

Prime Minister Trudeau's office said the memo was genuine but stressed that unilateral patriation was only one of the options being weighed by the government.

Ottawa, Levesque said, is trying to profit from the defeat of sovereignty-association in the May referendum to diminish Quebec's powers.

Hang glider plunges to death

Some 200 spectators watched in horror Sunday afternoon as a 35-year-old hang glider plunged 300 metres to his death in Lake Cowichan.

In the crowd was the victim's wife and 18-month-old child.

Patrick Adams of Campbell River was to give a demonstration for the Lake Cowichan Waterskiing Club.

As Adams was being towed aloft by a boat, his kite collapsed. He managed to get clear of the kite and hurtled to the lake.

Lake Cowichan RCMP said Adams fell between 265 and 310 metres.

Auto import quotas studied

OTTAWA (UPC) — The Canadian government would follow an American lead to protect the domestic auto industry by imposing import restrictions on Japanese cars, Industry Minister Herb Gray said on the weekend.

Public pressure to impose restrictions will increase unless there is a "substantial increase in the Canadian content" of Japanese imports, Gray said during a Standard Broadcast News radio interview.

Gray did not provide any specifics about how or when the import restrictions might be implemented.

"I'm not saying it would have to be identical action, but we would have to take steps, in our own interests, depending on what the United States did with respect to these Japanese imports," he added.

"Certainly, if the United States government takes restrictive measures in response to the investigation that's now under way by their international trade commission, we in Canada will have to give consideration to equivalent action of our trade situation and in light of our own legal frame-work," Gray said.

In the past six months, Japanese imports increased "very rapidly" while American manufacturers, notably, Chrysler, laid off workers when sales declined.

MiG jet shot down, Israelis warn Syria

TEL AVIV (AP) — The Israeli military warned today that it will not tolerate further Syrian air intrusions over southern Lebanon, where Israeli jets shot down a Syrian MiG-21 in a dogfight Sunday.

However, Israeli authorities sought to play down indications of heightened tension in the Israel-Lebanon border zone.

The frontier was reported quiet today. The artillery duels between Palestinian guerrillas and Israeli-backed Lebanese Christian militias ceased, Israeli authorities said.

The Maariv newspaper quoted an unidentified senior army officer as saying Israel will not permit Syrian jets to interfere with what Israel regards as its right to carry out routine aerial reconnaissance in southern Lebanon. The army spokesman in Tel Aviv confirmed the accuracy of Maariv's report.

"There is no change in policy from before the clash," said Dan Pattir, spokesman for Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who also is acting as defence minister.

The Jerusalem Post quoted sources as saying Israel wants to defuse the current tension. As evidence, the sources noted that Israel has not retaliated for the rockets that Palestinian gunners fired at settlements in northern Israel late last week.

The dogfight, the first since last September, occurred east of the Lebanese port of Sidon, 24 kilometres north of the Israel-Lebanon frontier. The two aerial clashes of 1979 were farther north and Sunday's dogfight appeared to mark a new willingness by Syria to enter the embattled southern region, which the Israeli air force patrols regularly.

The Soviet-made Syrian MiG-21 jet was shot down near the village of Kfar Milka, about 10 kilometres east of the Mediterranean city of Sidon. The Israeli command said all of its planes returned intact.

A Syrian military communique confirmed the loss of one Soviet-made jet and claimed an Israeli plane was hit.

The Syrian pilot parachuted to safety.

Chutist killed by plane

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A parachutist who had just jumped at 2,286 metres was struck and killed by a cargo plane in what one aviation official called a "one-in-a-billion" accident in the skies over the Borderland Air Sports Centre.

"He (the parachutist) was in the free-fall portion of his jump, which means he hadn't pulled his chute yet and was moving at a horrendous speed," said a U.S. Federal Aviation Administration official who asked not to be identified.

John Peter Nichols, 24, was pronounced dead at the scene of the Saturday accident, a San Diego County sheriff's deptaartment deputy said.

Meanwhile, a 5.5-magnitude earthquake causing no damage rattled the Shumagin Islands off Alaska Friday.

She moved, he bit ...band played on

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A postal worker, who says he only remembers whispering in his girlfriend's ear, has been convicted of mayhem and malicious disfigurement for taking a bite out of it and spitting it on the floor.

Sharon Diana Ross, 31, told a jury that after having a fight with Charles F. Williams, 30, he demanded that she dance with him. When the couple was on the dance floor, Miss Ross said, Williams whispered in her ear that if she moved he would bite it off. She moved and he did.

But Miss Ross said she was still friends with Williams, even after undergoing plastic surgery three times to have her ear reconstructed.

Williams will be sentenced Oct. 9.

Violent crime on rise in B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crimes of violence have taken an alarming jump in B.C. in the first half of this year, led by an increase in homicides of 28.2 per cent from the same period last year.

The latest statistics compiled from monthly reports of all municipal police forces and RCMP detachments of B.C. show at least 61 B.C. residents have met a violent death this year at the hands of a murderer.

Despite more strict federal legislation controlling firearms, guns were used in Vancouver robberies 44 per cent more in the first six months this year than in the same period a year ago.

The number of homicides in the province and the percentage increase exceeds that of either Metropolitan Toronto or Montreal, each with a population larger than B.C.

In B.C. by the end of June, 50 persons, including 16 in Vancouver, were strangled or fell victim to a knife, gun, blunt instrument or other device, wielded in most cases by someone they knew, compared with 39 for the same period in 1979. Eleven more murders have been reported since July 1.

There was an over-all increase of 12.9 per cent in violent crimes to the end of June. Sexual offences were up 21.4 per cent, including an increase of nearly 19 per cent in the number of rapes.

Robberies increased 25.1 per cent and assaults rose 11 per cent.

Frank Letkeman, director of data processing in the attorney-general's department, said the number of traffic injuries in the month of July was almost double that of the same month last year.

The over-all rate of increase for Criminal Code offences in B.C. was 7.1 cent, compared with 2.7 in 1979, 5.6 in 1978, 2.6 in 1977 and 0.8 in 1976.

Letkeman said there is a long-term pattern of crime rates rising for several years, then levelling off for a while before climbing to a higher plateau.

"It would seem we are now subject to the next climb," he said.

Car finder Sandy Sandford uses computer to match up vehicle, buyers and sellers

By PAT DUFOUR

Sandy Sandford runs what he calls a dating service for cars.

He recently formed Consumers' Auto Finders, working out of 1125 Haultain, and became a middle man for people who want to sell or buy used cars.

He got the idea when he worked for a while as a car salesman.

A graduate in psychology and sociology, Sandford says: "I saw that the customers, the public, weren't being terribly well served. They had to go through a lot of work and a lot of hassle."

Through the use of a computer, Sandford lists details of cars that are on the market and people who are looking for cars.

He says it is similar to the multiple-listing real estate service and the only one of its type, involving cars, in Western Canada.

The fledgling business now has about 200 vehicles in its inventory and Sandford says he has about 100 new listings coming in per week.

About 40 per cent of the listings are from individuals who either want to sell or buy a used car.

"We make every possible effort to sell his vehicle and make it as easy as possible," he says.

Sandford sees every car that is listed in his computer, takes pictures of it, and grades it — condition of the body, engine performance and other vital factors.

To get on his list, a customer pays $35 for 30 days.

If the car is not sold by then, Sandford checks with the client for, maybe, a readjustment of the asking price, and extends his service for another 30 days, free of charge.

Just as in the real estate business, buyers of cars listed in his inventory pay no charge.

He has some car dealers among his clientele but he says he is choosy and demands that vehicles he lists meet certain standards.

He has some advice for people shopping around for a used car.

He says it's worth the $40 it costs to have the car tested at the B.C. Automobile Association station at Pandora and Cook.

He also says people should buy a car that suits their needs, rather than their fancy.

"There is a large demand for small, economical, dependable cars — particularly Valiants — but they sell at a premium price," he says.

"There are a lot of people here who drive between 5,000 and 6,000 miles a year. They'd be better off to buy an old station wagon."

Sandford is plenty busy but plans to expand.

He's made arrangements to buy time in a larger computer system and in October or November intends to start a similar service in Vancouver.

Tourist industry day is over, says Cooper

By AL FORREST

Victoria has become overly-obsessed with the tourist industry while its key industrial jobs continue to drain away, Ald. John Cooper said today.

"The tourist industry was good to us in the 1970s but we have become too comfortable. And we have failed to notice that the tourist industry has had its day.

"It has peaked and is on the decline. If we continue to rely on it too much we will pay the price."

Meanwhile, he said, the community sits back and lets vital jobs leave town.

He cited the loss of about 200 jobs to Nanaimo if the oil tank farms go to Duke Point plus other recent layoffs, including 59 people at Victoria Press.

"I am shocked by the continuing apathy about these losses. Layoffs mean people will be moving out of Victoria."

Cooper said he will present a motion at the next city council meeting calling for an urgent dialogue on Victoria's growing economic crisis.

"We must get together now — council, the Chamber of Commerce, the Victoria Labor Council — everyone who is concerned about jobs in this community."

He said it is incredible that a community could be lulled to sleep by tourist revenues while major industries have moved out one after another.

These included: the St. Michelle winery, Bapco Paint, James Island explosive plant, McDonald's Bakery and now, apparently, the oil tank farm industry.

"Chickens are coming home to roost. When the tourists stop coming, there might be nothing left but the government."

He said it is not difficult to document the fact that the tourist industry is on the skids.

Across North America, he said, the reports show that fewer people are travelling. There is a concern about fuel costs and supplies and there is a general belt-tightening because of the U.S. recession.

But beyond that there has been a basic change in attitude, he said.

"People aren't going to the moon any more. Fewer people want to fly in a 747 at 35,000 feet. Everyone is getting back to earth."

At vacation time people are taking shorter trips. Many are staying around home.

Cooper said this trend will soon hit Victoria and, when it does, the city's economy will be in disarray because it has relied on tourist revenues while year-around industrial jobs have left town.

The city must do two things.

First, it must act now to protect the jobs it has, taking whatever action it can to head off any further draining away of industries.

Second, it must make a serious effort to attract new industries.

Cooper said the chamber must play a key role in both activities because it now is running the industrial development commission. But city council must play a leadership role by alerting the community to the urgency of the problem and by starting a constructive dialogue on possible solutions.

In case you're wondering

My sister and I have been arguing about what was originally on the corner of Pandora and Government across from the McPherson Theatre, and also what was on the site where the McPherson now stands. At one time it was a roller skating rink. Mrs. W.H.S.

The corner has a rich and varied history, according to Victoria archivist Ainslie Helmcken.

On the McPherson Theatre site stood the Pantages Theatre with a fine entrance off Government.

The building was originally planned as a business block and was started about 1912 by R.T. Elliot, a well-known Victoria lawyer.

At the time the Pantages family was operating a theatre on lower Johnson Street but it was "a bit of a dump" and the family persuaded Elliot to change his plans, says Helmcken.

The theatre underwent extensive renovations in the 60s. The work was paid for by a large bequest left to the city by the late Thomas Shanks McPherson, after whom the building was subsequently named.

Across the street, the large building now used by senior citizens for bingo games was once a theatre called the Variety.

Helmcken recalls seeing a color slide show in the early 1900s of the Indian Durbar in Delhi, an event that was held shortly after the death of Edward VII.

The theatre, however, wasn't successful. All the seats were on the same level and the audience had to strain their necks to see the shows.

After it closed — the date is forgotten but it was likely in the early 20s — it was converted into a roller skating rink. The sport was popular here at the time and Helmcken says there were several rinks about the city.

But that use didn't last many years. For a while it was a meeting place for evangelical groups but as time went on the building became more or less abandoned, a derelict, until the senior citizens took over in the early 60s.

Helmcken says that years ago Cormorant intersected with Pandora near the corner. Cormorant was dead-ended after the creation of Centennial Square. But back in the early years of this century an odd triangular-shaped building stood at the junction. The building, long gone, was once occupied by Chinese businesses and included a small opium factory.

Woman charged in hit-run

A 32-year-old woman was charged on the weekend with failing to remain at the scene of an accident after a 19-year-old woman was killed early Saturday in a hit-and-run accident in Colwood.

Irene Goodson, 2834 Sooke Road, was remanded to mid-September, police said.

The victim, Sherri Rose Stratford of Dunford Road, Langford, was walking along Station Street with her boyfriend about 2:05 a.m. when struck by a northbound vehicle. The driver stopped, then left the scene, RCMP said.

She was admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital but died of head injuries at 4:46 a.m. Her companion was not hurt.

The RCMP said a woman turned herself in to the Colwood detachment at 9 a.m. Saturday. The vehicle believed to have been involved was recovered at Sooke.

$1,300 SMILE is flashed by Kay Verdiel, 3715 Cadboro Bay, winner in the last contest in the Payoff Puzzle in the Times. A regular entrant in the long-running series, Mrs. Verdiel said she will spend some of the money on her grandchildren and some to see "my old mum in England." Contest ran 26 weeks before producing a winner. (Bill Halkett photo).

Hall of fame for speaker from city

Victor E. Lindal, 4419 Chartwell Drive, was named Saturday in Milwaukee, Wis., to the Toastmasters International hall of fame.

Lindal, the only Canadian in the group's annual international speaking contest, finished fourth out of nine competitors.

B.C. looks at prod for rental housing

Housing Minister Jim Chabot is considering a provincial version of the defunct federal capital cost allowance to stimulate rental housing construction.

Chabot said in a weekend interview he suggested Ottawa reinstate the allowance at a recent meeting with federal Housing Minister Paul Cosgrove.

The allowance, dropped Dec. 31, 1979, allowed developers who built rental housing to defer taxes on the buildings for five years, providing an incentive to invest.

The B.C. government says apartment construction has slowed to a standstill since the allowance was cancelled.

Chabot said he suggested a modified form of the allowance which would apply only in provinces where there is a premium on rental housing.

"If, for instance, the vacancy rate in a province dropped below two per cent, the capital cost allowance would come into effect," he said.

Although the response was favorable, "I don't think the federal government is about to do it," he said.

"We're looking now at options that could be introduced on the provincial scene only. For example, there's the possibility of introducing a capital cost allowance program on a provincial basis only, but we need to arrange it with the federal government to ensure that they do not tax away all the benefits.

New program to teach care of the ill at home

Canadian Red Cross Society and St. John Ambulance are launching a program in B.C. to train lay people how to care for the ill in their homes.

The course covers a wide range of home care skills, including factors that determine whether an individual can be cared for in the home, and how to create a safe and therapeutic environment for the ill or convalescent person.

Basic health care is taught, including the taking of temperature, pulse and respiration rates. Lay persons are also taught how to recognize changes that might signify illness.

Dr. Wally Thomas, member adviser to the B.C.-Yukon Division of the Red Cross Society, said the project is not just aimed at care for the elderly but also for the chronically ill who will be able to stay at home rather than in hospital.

Thrust of the program is a return to the concept that a person is often much better off being cared for under the loving atmosphere of a home rather than in a hospital.

"But this program has another function and that is it can only help in bringing a reduction in the number of days a person spends in a hospital," Thomas said.

Police seek witnesses

Saanich police are looking for anyone who saw a single-car crash on Shelbourne Street at Derby Road at 2:43 a.m. today.

A 16-year-old youth, the only occupant of the car, is in good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Police say the car, a 1979 Mazda station wagon, collided with a power pole on the northeast corner of the intersection.

60 school supers locally selected

Sixty of B.C.'s 75 school districts will operate with locally-appointed superintendents in September, following a change in the School Act.

All boards were given the right for the first time to appoint their own superintendents. Until this year only large districts, with 4,000 or more students, had that right.

Education Minister Brian Smith said 60 districts either had locally-appointed superintendents already or intended to have one by September.

"Districts (now) will be able to get exactly the type of person they need to meet their specific needs," he said.
